* ARTHUR AMORY, the second son of James Sullivan and Mary Copley (Greene) Amory, was born in Boston, February 6, 1841. He fitted for college at Epes S. Dixwell's school in Boston. In the summer of 1860 he visited Greenland with a scientific expedition from Williams College, a trip full of interesting and valuable experience.

In September, 1863, Amory went to New York to engage in the dry-goods commission business, as salesman with Messrs. Slade and Colby. On the dissolution of this firm, in 1866, he became a partner in the house of Upham, Tucker and Co., a branch of the old Boston house of the same name, established in March, 1833, under the name of Searle and Upham. In June, 1877, he returned to Boston; his firm later became Dana, Tucker and Co., and, in January, 1896, Amory, Browne and Co. He was at one time president of the Nashua Manufacturing Co., the Jackson Co., and the Indian Head Mills, at Cordova, Ala.

While in New York, in 1865, Amory was one of the founders of the Harvard Club of that city; he also belonged to the Thursday Evening Whist Club, the Union Club, and the New York Club. In Boston he was a member of the Somerset Club, the Wednesday Evening Club, the Club of Odd Volumes, and the Eastern Yacht Club. He was Chief Marshal of his class at the 25th anniversary in 1887.

Amory died at his home, 133 Marlborough St., Boston, August 9, 1911.

He married, June 6, 1866, Elizabeth Wilcox Ingersoll, daughter of Charles Ingersoll, of Philadelphia. Mrs. Amory died March 3, 1905.

CHILDREN:

* ARTHUR AMORY (H. C., 1892), Dec. 11, 1867; died Dec. 20, 1898.

INGERSOLL AMORY (H. C., 1892), Nov. 23, 1869.

* SUBAN AMORY, Aug. 2, 1871; died July 2, 1910.

4 CLASS OF 'SIXTY-TWO—H. U.

ETHEL AMORY, March 21, 1873.

* SULLIVAN AMORY, Feb. 22, 1878; died May 5, 1881.

ARTHUR AMORY, Jr., married, June 8, 1898, Mabel W. Sard, daughter of Grange Sard, of Albany, N. Y.

SUSAN AMORY was married, Nov. 21, 1904, to Edwin B. Bartlett, eldest son of William Francis Bartlett, of the class of 1862.

Child: BETTY AMORY BARTLETT, Dec. 5, 1906.

INGERSOLL AMORY is in business in Boston, at 10 Post Office Square.

* CHARLES CARROLL BALCH, son of William and — (Stone) Balch, was born in Newburyport, Mass., May 9, 1841. He fitted for college at the Brown High school. His intention of coming to college was formed only a year before it was realized. Balch was drowned while bathing at Salisbury Beach, Maine, August 27, 1863.

MURRAY ROBERTS BALLOU, son of Maturin M. and Mary A. A. (Roberts) Ballou, was born in Boston, July 21, 1840. He fitted for college at E. S. Dixwell's school, and with Rev. Luther Farnham and Sidney Willard. After graduation, he went into business as a broker, in partnership with Mifflin. In 1870 he became president of the Boston Stock Exchange, a position he held until his retirement from business in 1900.

Residence, 10 Charles Street, Boston.

Ballou married, December 1, 1863, Lucretia B. Howland, of New Bedford. Mrs. Ballou died July 27, 1899.

CHILDREN:

* MATURIN HOWLAND, March 12, 1865; died May 15, 1898.

ELISE MURRAY, Oct. 1, 1866.

FRANKLIN BURGESS, Jan. 23, 1870.

MABEL, Jan. 23, 1870.

MATURIN H. BALLOU (son of Murray R.) the "Class Baby," was an electrical engineer: he installed the electric-lighting plant in the Castle Square Theatre: he was at one time superintendent of the pumping station at the Chestnut Hill Reservoir: and he built several electric roads, including one at Sydney, N. S. W. "He died in May, 1898, in North Carolina, leaving one son, Maturin Murray Ballou, who is now twenty-three years old and six feet one in height."

LUTHER GUSTAVUS BARRETT, son of Luther Gustavus and Margaret (Ridley) Barrett, was born in Watertown, Mass., December 5, 1838. Part of his early years were spent on his uncle's farm in Sturbridge, greatly influencing his subsequent life. He fitted for college at the Watertown High School. In September, 1862, he entered Newton Theological Institution at Newton Centre, Mass., graduating in 1865. During the last year he spent some three months in the army of the James, in the service of the U. S. Christian Commission. September 17, 1865, he was ordained at Watertown, Brother Lecompte assisting in the services. But, though a good pastorate and a college professorship in New Testament Interpretation invited, broken health compelled rest. Most of that autumn was passed in the South, and a large part of the next year, 1866, in travel in Europe. Health restored, in December, 1867, he accepted a pastorate in Weston, Mass., and subsequently in Winchester, Mass.; at Berean Church, New York City; South Abington (Whitman), Mass., and Concord, N. H. During the year 1885-1886 he was professor of Biblical Interpretation and Classics in Shaw University, Raleigh, N. C. Then followed pastorates in Bristol, R. I.; Lowell and Milford, Mass. In September, 1894, he became president of Jackson College, Jackson, Miss., which office, after seventeen years' strenuous work and successful administration, he resigned September 30, 1911. He has returned to Massachusetts, and resides at 6 Sacramento St., Cambridge, while his son, Herbert, finishes his last year at the Harvard Law School; intending thereafter, without further public responsibility, to enjoy a quiet home in Melrose, at 100 Vinton St. His summer address is Oak Bluffs, Mass.

Barrett married, June 9, 1869, Mary Annette Hawkes, of Chelsea; she died March 16, 1877, in New York City.

CHILDREN:

FLORENCE HAWKES, March 26, 1870.

* GEORGE RIDLEY, Feb. 1, 1876; died July 21, 1876.

* HELEN JEANNETTE, Jan. 20, 1877; died May 19, 1877.

FLORENCE HAWKES BARRETT was married, May 17, 1896, to Herbert Daniel Casey.

Child: * NATHAN BARRETT CASEY, May 15, 1903; died April 25, 1908.

Barrett married Ella Maria Short, of Danielsonville, Conn., Sept. 15, 1885.

CHILD: HERBERT LUTHER, Dec. 5, 1886; about to graduate from the Harvard Law School.

WILLIAM FRANCIS BARTLETT*, son of Charles Leonard and Harriett (Plummer) Bartlett, was born at Haverhill, Mass., June 6, 1840. His family moved to Boston soon after his birth; and he fitted for college there at the private school of W. H. Brooks. April 17, 1861, he enlisted as private in the Fourth Battalion Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, stationed at Fort Independence, Boston Harbor. On the formation of the Twentieth Regiment, Bartlett was commissioned as captain, July 10. He was at the battle of Ball's Bluff, October 21. April 24, 1862, while before Yorktown, he received a wound in the left knee which necessitated the amputation of the leg. In September, 1862, he took command of Fort Briggs, Pittsfield, Mass., where the Forty-ninth Regiment was assembling. November 10 he was chosen colonel of the regiment; on the departure of the regiment for New Orleans in January, Bartlett rode down Broadway with his crutch strapped to his back. In the assault on Port Hudson, May 27, 1863, he was again wounded, this time in the left wrist. After the mustering-out of the Forty-ninth (a nine-months' regiment), Bartlett raised the Fifty-seventh, which he took to Virginia in April, 1864. In the battle of the Wilderness, May 6, he was again slightly wounded. June 22, 1864, he was made a brigadier-general, and in July took command of a brigade in the Ninth Corps, then before Petersburg. At the assault of July 30, after the explosion of the mine, Bartlett was taken prisoner. He was in captivity two months; from disease caused by the hardships of this period he never fully recovered. In June, 1865, he returned to active duty, taking command of the First Division of the Ninth Corps; but on July 14 the division was broken up and his active service was over. On being mustered out July 16, 1866, he received the commission of major-general by brevet, to date from March 13, 1865.

On returning to civil life, Bartlett engaged at first in the manufacture of paper at Dalton, and in the manufacture of iron at the Pomeroy Iron Works at West Stockbridge. Later he became president and general manager of the Powhatan Iron Works at Richmond, Va.; and for some years he spent his winters in Richmond and his summers at his home in Pittsfield, until his failing health forbade the change. He gave up business and led a very quiet life, declining, in 1875, both the Republican nomination for governor and the Democratic nomination for lieutenant-governor. His health was constantly failing; and he died at his home in Pittsfield, December 17, 1876.

In the years following the war, as during the four years of conflict, Bartlett strove for the restoration of the Union. He preached peace, good-will, the rebuilding of the shattered fabric on the firm foundations of mutual respect and confidence and loyalty to the Republic. His was the high statesmanship that looked forward, that recognized the best qualities of men, even of men who had erred, and sought to use them for the restoration of order, the revival of prosperity, and the solution of the numerous and difficult problems, — political, social, and financial, — involved in the restoration of the Southern States to their place in the Union. At the dedication of Memorial Hall, June 24, 1874, he uttered these solemn words of warning: "Take care lest you repel by injustice or suspicion, or even by indifference, the returning love of men who now speak with pride of that flag as 'our flag.'" The next Spring, at the centennial celebration at Lexington, after renewing his appeal, and paying a tribute to the good faith and loyalty to the reunited country of the leaders of the Southern cause, he added: "These are the men by whom and through whom you must restore the South."

Bartlett married, October 14, 1865, Agnes Pomeroy, daughter of Robert Pomeroy, of Pittsfield. Mrs. Bartlett died February 16, 1909.

CHILDREN:

AGNES, Sept. 16, 1866.

CAROLYN, Feb. 17, 1869.

EDWIN BARTLETT, Nov. 26, 1871.

* ROBERT POMEROY, March 20, 1874; died in March, 1903.

* WILLIAM FRANCIS, March 20, 1874; died in May, 1906.

EDITH, Sept. 24, 1876.

AGNES BARTLETT married Henry A. Francis, of Pittsfield. They have one son, J. Dwight Francis.

CAROLYN BARTLETT married James H. Kidd, of Tivoli, N.Y. They have four children; CAROLYN POMEROY KIDD, JAMES H. KIDD, Jr., ROBERT P. B. KIDD, AGNES F. KIDD.

8 CLASS OF 'SIXTY-TWO—H. U.

EDWIN B. BARTLETT married, Nov. 21, 1904. Susan Amory, daughter of our classmate. They had one daughter, BETTY AMORY BARTLETT, born Dec. 5, 1906. Mrs. Bartlett died in July, 1910. Mr. Bartlett is in business in Albany.

ROBERT P. BARTLETT married, in January, 1900, Ruth Hart Robinson. They had one daughter, AGNES POMEROY BARTLETT.

WILLIAM F. BARTLETT married, in December, 1903, Ella de Long.

EDITH BARTLETT lives in Pittsfield.

There is a bust of Bartlett in Alumni Hall. The bronze statue in the Memorial Hall in the State House in Boston was dedicated May 27, 1904. A memoir, by General F. W. Palfrey, was published in 1878.

ITHAMAR WARREN BEARD, son of Ithamar Warren and Mary Atkins (Todd) Beard, was born in Pittsfield, N. H., February 23, 1840. He fitted for college at the Cambridge High School. At the end of the Junior year he left college, intending to enter the army, but gave that up on account of his father's health. He received his degree in 1870. He began the study of law in the office of J. S. and G. F. Richardson, was admitted to the bar October 17, 1864, and in 1866, after serving for a year as secretary of the State Mutual Fire Insurance Company, he began the practise of law in Lowell. In November, 1867, he was elected Register of Deeds for the Middlesex North District, and was re-elected in 1870.

In 1866, Beard joined the Protestant Episcopal Church, and studied as a candidate for the ministry. In September, 1872, he entered the senior class of the Protestant Episcopal Theological School in Cambridge, graduating as B.D., June 18, 1873. Ordained deacon, June 15, 1873. Called to be rector of St. James' Church, South Groveland, July 28, 1873; entered upon his duties in September, 1873. Ordained to the priesthood June 21, 1874. November 1, 1876, he became rector of St. Thomas' Church, Dover, N. H.

In 1899 Beard gave up his parish at Dover, after twenty-three years' service, and became chaplain of the Chapel of the Good Shepherd, on Blackwell's Island, New York City. He regards his work at Dover as eminently successful in every respect. In 1882 he wrote: "My life is the quiet and satisfactory life of a parish minister. I have done nothing particularly to distinguish myself; and, on the other hand, I have never been caught in any especially disagreeable act." In December, 1911, he writes: "I am finding my last days my best days. I am very well physically, and constantly busy about my work, which I enjoy very much, and am consequently very happy and contented." Four of his children are actively engaged in educational and charitable work. He lives at 244 E. 105th St., N. Y.

Beard married, December 18, 1869, Mary Foster of Lowell.

CHILDREN:

THEODORA, March 7, 1871.

ITHAMUR MANSUR (H. C., 1895), Nov. 28, 1872.

ELIZA WARREN, Oct. 28, 1874.

MARY, Nov. 14, 1876.

ALISON, Aug. 29, 1879.

* MARGARET, Dec. 31, 1881; died July 23, 1889.

ALISON BEARD was married, in 1909, to Prof. Carl Oscar Louis Collin, of Wellesley College.

JAMES VILA BLAKE, son of Hamlin and Elizabeth (Dexter) Blake, was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., January 21, 1842. He fitted for college at the Brooklyn Collegiate and Polytechnic Institute, and entered the Sophomore class in 1859. He received a Boylston prize for elocution, and a Bowdoin essay prize. On graduating, he served one year as a secretary in the office of Governor Andrew, and entered the Harvard Divinity School in September, 1863; on completing the course there, he was ordained and settled at Haverhill, Mass., January 3, 1867. He resigned his charge at Haverhill, and accepted a call from the Twenty-eighth Congregational Society in Boston, being installed there in December, 1868. He resigned in November, 1871, and removed to New York, April, 1872, to enter into business in his brother's firm, C. H. and F. D. Blake; he resided at Englewood, N. J. January 1, 1877, he left business and returned to the ministry. In September, 1877, he was settled in Quincy, Ill., with the Second Congregational (Unitarian) Society. In 1883 he left Quincy and became minister of the Third Unitarian Church of Chicago. In 1892 he became minister also of the Church of All Souls in Evanston, Ill., serving both churches until 1897, when he resigned from the Chicago church, retaining that at Evanston, which he has now served continuously for nearly twenty years. "The Society is small, thriving, happy; and my long ministry with them has been one of very great happiness to me. About seven years ago my people built a stone chapel notable in this neighborhood for its solid construction and its very beautiful architecture." While ministering to the two churches, Blake was employed for a time by Morgan and Wright, manufacturers of rubber tires, as superintendent of their factory. In Chicago he took an active part in the work of the Associated Charities.

Blake has published books, as follows:

(1880) Unity Hymns and Chorals, in collaboration with W. C. Gannett and F. L. Hosmer; (1884) Unity Festivals, being services for Easter, Christmas, Summer, Harvest; (1886) Manual Training in Education; (1887) Essays; (1887) Poems; (1888) Legends from Story-Land; (1890) A Grateful Spirit and other sermons; (1891) Happiness from Thoughts and other sermons; (1891) St. Solifer, with Other Worthies and Unworthies; (1892) Natural Religion in sermons; (1892) Book of Worship, in Readings, Songs, and Prayers; (1893) More than Kin; (1894) An Anchor of the Soul, a Study of Faith; (1894) Unity Services and Songs, for Sunday Schools; (1898) Sonnets; (1902) Songs; (1904) Discoveries (a poetical work); (1907) The Months (a poetical work, partly in prose); (1909) So Like Her Father, a drama; (1910) A Merry-Go-Round, a comedy; (1911) The Lady Bertha's Honey-Broth, a drama.

He has also written, but has not yet printed, several volumes, both in prose and verse. Some of his songs have been set to music.

Residence, 122 North Ashland Boulevard, Chicago.

Blake married, June 22, 1869, Abbie Frances Hovey, of Haverhill, Mass.

CHILDREN:

CLINTON FREDERICK, May 4, 1871.

* AMES CARLETON, April 29, 1873; died Oct. 12, 1874.

RACHEL F. BLAKE married Jerome Hamilton Mahony.

RUTH D. BLAKE married Frederick A. Thomson.

* EDWARD CARSON BOWMAN was born in Dadeville, Ala., March 20, 1841. His mother, a widow, came to Massachusetts before he was five years old. In 1851 he made a voyage to San Francisco in the Flying Cloud, returning in 1855 by way of Panama. He fitted for college at the Chauncy Hall school in Boston. Soon after graduation, he entered the United States navy as acting assistant paymaster. In the autumn of 1863 he saw service on the Rio Grande, at the capture of Aransas Pass and Port Cavallo; and he was present at the capture of the forts at Mobile. In 1864 he was on the steamer Virginia. He died at New Orleans, of yellow fever, October 17, 1864.

* CHARLES BOYDEN, son of Dwight and Maria A. (Whiting) Boyden, was born in Waltham, Mass., October 7, 1840. He fitted for college at the Chauncy Hall School and with Mr. Joseph Willard. After graduation he remained in Cambridge a few months as a resident graduate; in December he sailed for Europe, where he remained till the Spring of 1865. After his return he for a time superintended silver mines in Nevada, then travelled again in Europe. On his return he settled in Boston, spending his summers in Stockbridge.

Boyden died suddenly in the train, on the way to Beverly with his family, May 24, 1881.

Boyden married, February 25, 1879, Cora Crowninshield, daughter of George C. Crowninshield.

CHILD:

CHARLES (H. C., 1901), Feb. 19, 1880. He married, April 14, 1903, Harriet Howard Ely.

Children: HARRIET HOWARD, Oct. 19, 1904.

ANSTICE CROWNINSHIELD, May 10, 1910.

He is a stockbroker in Boston.

SOLOMON HOYT BRACKETT, son of Josiah P. and Susan (Edmands) Brackett, was born in Framingham, Mass., September 25, 1838. He fitted for college at Phillips Exeter Academy, and entered college the Sophomore year. After graduating, he taught school at Provincetown and at Stoneham, and in April, 1868, was elected principal of the high school in Keene, N. H. In 1875 he was appointed professor of natural sciences in St. Johnsbury Academy, Vt.; he afterwards became superintendent. Here he remained till June, 1900, when he moved to Claremont, Cal., where he found occupation in an organ factory. In 1902 he was teaching physics and chemistry in the high school at San Bernardino; he then taught for two years in the high school at Redlands. In 1903 he gave up teaching, settled at Claremont, and has occupied himself in surveying, the manufacture of scientific apparatus, etc. For many years he has suffered from a spinal trouble, which has unfitted him for anything but light work.

Brackett married, July 20, 1864, Mary A. Thomas.

CHILDREN:

FRANK PARKHURST, June 16, 1865.

MABEL SUSAN, Jan. 20, 1868.

* MARY CELESTE, Aug. 8, 1874; died Sept. 20, 1902.

JOHN HENRY, Aug. 17, 1876.

FRANK P. BRACKETT is professor of Mathematics at Pomona College, Claremont.

JOHN HENRY BRACKETT is an electrical engineer in San Francisco.

WILLIAM TUFTS BRIGHAM, son of William Brigham (H. C. 1829) and Margaret Austin (Brooks) Brigham, was born in Boston, May 24, 1841. He fitted for college at the Boston Latin School. He was class secretary till 1887, when Grinnell took his place. After graduation he studied law in his father's office for eighteen months, and then started for San Francisco, where he was joined by Mr. Horace Mann. After exploring the mines of Washoe and some of the hot springs of California and Nevada, they sailed for the Hawaiian Islands, where they arrived in May, 1864, and began a scientific exploration of the Islands. After six months, Brigham was appointed professor of natural sciences in Oahu College; but he resigned in October, 1865, and returned home by way of China, India, Egypt, and Europe. He was admitted to the bar in 1867. In 1868-1869, on the death of Mr. Mann, he taught botany for a time at Harvard College. In 1869 he went to California over the Pacific Railroad, then just opened, visiting Salt Lake City and the Yosemite Valley. He was for six years a member of the Boston school board, giving especial attention to drawing in the public schools, then a new branch of instruction; he organized evening drawing schools, and established a Normal Art School. In 1872 he visited Great Britain with the Japanese Embassy; and in 1878 journeyed with a friend through southern France and northern Italy. During these years he delivered several courses of lectures on scientific subjects. In 1876 he was appointed by the Hawaiian government honorary commissioner to the Centennial Exhibition at Philadelphia, to report on the geology and mineralogy of the kingdom. In June, 1880, he made a second visit to the Hawaiian Islands, and made an exploration of the volcanoes Kilauea and Mauna Loa. For several years after his return he practised law in Boston, at the same time pursuing his scientific studies, and publishing articles on scientific subjects. He made a special study of the laws of growth in the human body, as influenced by physical exercise and affected by race. He was also much interested in photography, in which he became highly skilful. In July, 1886, he was appointed consul in Boston for the Republic of Guatemala.

In 1888 Brigham went to Honolulu, to collect material for a history of the Islands. In 1890 he became director of the Bernice Pauahi Bishop Museum of Polynesian Ethnology and Natural History. To this work he has devoted himself ever since; and under his care the museum, "from a building of two small rooms and a picture-gallery, has more than quadrupled in size, and by its collections, scientific works, and publications, has attained an honorable place among the museums of the world." In 1896 Brigham went round the world a second time, making a study of ethnological museums, and marine zoological stations. This spring he has made a third visit to Europe for the same purpose.

He writes, March 9, 1912: "As to the biography, there is nothing, except that I have been writing up the contents of this museum until my eyes have given out, and I am coming to Boston to find an oculist. I hope to sail for Europe before May 1."

Brigham's publications have been numerous, varied, and valuable. He early became a Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences; and he is Corresponding and Honorary Member of many scientific societies, both in the United States and in Europe. In 1905 he received from Columbia University the honorary degree of Doctor in Science.

Address: Bernice Pauahi Bishop Museum, Honolulu, Hawaiian Islands.

Brigham never married. Some years ago he adopted as his son Frank E. Blaisdell, who died in 1887.

JOSEPH PERRIN BURRAGE*, son of Joseph and Frances Sophia (Perrin) Burrage, was born in Boston, May 4, 1842. He fitted for college at Phillips Andover Academy. During his college life he lived in West Cambridge, and walked daily to and from college. May 18, 1863, he was commissioned second lieutenant in the Thirty-third Massachusetts Regiment. He was killed at the battle of Lookout Mountain, October 29, 1863.

CLARK CARTER, son of Elisha and Harriet (Wilson) Carter, was born in Boston, October 16, 1841. He fitted for college with Mr. T. D. Edmands, at Framingham, Mass. In the Spring of 1858, Carter joined the Orthodox Church in that town. During the Junior winter vacation, he taught school at Charlton, Mass.

From September, 1862, to April, 1864, Carter was at Port Royal, S. C., as government superintendent of abandoned plantations, under General Saxton. In September, 1864, he entered the Theological Seminary at Princeton. The long summer vacation of 1865 was spent at Charleston and Port Royal, investigating the condition of the freedmen, under the auspices of the Pennsylvania Freedmen's Relief Association. May 15, 1866, he was licensed to preach the Gospel by the Plymouth Association of Ministers at Plymouth; and on October 1 he entered the Theological Institute of Hartford, Conn., where he completed his preparatory studies in June, 1867. February 13, 1868, he was ordained and installed as pastor over the Trinity Congregational Church in Neponset, Mass.; was dismissed by council July 1, 1869; preached during the four closing months of that year at Rockville, Conn; and was settled at Great Falls, N. H., April 27, 1870. In June, 1872, he moved to Lawrence, Mass., where he supplied the pulpit of the Central Church through that year. In January, 1873, he was settled over the South Congregational Church, Lawrence, where he remained till July, 1888, when he accepted the post of city missionary and secretary of the Lawrence City Mission, a society established in 1859, but reorganized in 1885 on the principles of the Charity Organization Societies of other cities.

"This change of work introduced me to an entirely new outlook upon the world's needs, and brought me into intimate relations with social workers throughout the country. I have served two years as an overseer of the poor; was chairman of the committee of personal relief in 1890 when a disastrous cyclone swept a portion of the city; was for two years chairman of the Industrial Committee of the State Association of Congregational Churches of Massachusetts; was active in starting the Massachusetts State Conference of Charities; have served on its committees and been vice-president; have been president of the Boston Monday Evening Club and of the Essex North Congregational Club; am chaplain at the Lawrence jail; am an agent of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children; as chairman of the Lawrence Sanitary Milk Committee I have had a study made of the infant mortality of the city, and have seen a reduction of the death rate procured in part by the work of the committee in educating the public as to the importance of keeping milk clean, and in teaching mothers how to care for their babies. In these various positions I have felt with increasing force the value of genuine Christianity, and have seen, as I did not when I was a pastor, the opportunity of the true minister of Christ.

"In addition to the regular routine of an office which undertakes to relieve distress, advise in difficulty, and plan for the conquering of poverty, I have taken an interest in and lent my influence to the advancing of various social reforms. The restriction of child labor, the shortening of the hours of employment of women in manufacturing and mercantile establishments, the securing of one day of rest in seven for working men, the suppression of intemperance, and similar topics of legislation, I have advocated before committees of the General Court."

Address: 206 Essex Street, Lawrence, Mass.

Residence: 31 Bartlett Street, Andover, Mass.

Carter married, May 19, 1870, Emma Henrietta Pease, daughter of Rev. Giles Pease, of Boston.

WILLIAM HOBBS CHADBURN, son of George and Asenath (Hobbs) Chadbourn, was born in Sanford, Maine, February 18, 1841. He fitted for college at the Boston Latin School. He was one of the class-day marshals. After graduation he was for a few years with Jordan and Marsh; afterwards he was in business in Nashville. In 1872 he moved to Wilmington, N. C., and soon became one of the leaders in enterprises for the development of that section. He was the promoter and builder of the Wilmington, Chadbourn and Conway Railroad, and was its president until it was absorbed by the Atlantic Coast Line. He was also prominently interested in the establishment of the Wilmington Seacoast Railway. He has been president of the Citizens' Building and Loan Association of Wilmington since 1886, and was general manager of the Chadbourn Lumber Co., one of the largest and most successful enterprises of its kind in the State.

Chadbourn has also taken a part in public service. In 1885 he was in the State Senate, and has served as a director of the State Penitentiary, and as a trustee of the State University. He has been active in all the enterprises of the city of Wilmington, was an alderman for four years, and has been chairman of the board of audit and finance, and chairman of the police board. On January 7, 1898, he was appointed postmaster at Wilmington, a position which he held for several years.

In 1907 Chadbourn wrote: "Retired from active business." Since then he has been somewhat of an invalid, being of late confined to his bed.

Address: 307 Market Street, Wilmington, N. C.

Chadbourn married, May 31, 1863, Adelaide S. Peters, of Boston. Mrs. Chadbourn died Jan. 29, 1912.

GEORGE EDWIN CHAPMAN*, son of Edmund A. and Harriet (Brown) Chapman, was born in Cambridge, October 29, 1840. He fitted for college at the Cambridge High School. He was one of the class committee. In the Summer of 1862 he sailed for Europe, and began studying at the University of Göttingen; but failing health induced him to travel in Switzerland. Obtaining there no relief, he returned home in June, 1863, and, after a year at Cambridge, went to Minnesota, hoping to find the climate beneficial; but he was again disappointed. He returned to Cambridge, and died there February 3, 1865.

JAMES GILMAN COLE*, son of John Greenleaf and Lavinia (Brooks) Cole, was born in Woburn, Mass., March 9, 1841. After graduation he went to Port Royal, S. C., as superintendent of plantations; he settled on Ladies' Island.

He died February 12, 1904.

CHARLES JEROME COLEMAN* was born in Cincinnati, Sept. 15, 1841. After studying law at the Cincinnati Law School, he went into business, tried farming, and became connected with a large oil business in the West. In January, 1879, he returned East, and took up the profession of music as a composer, organist, and teacher, at first in Cincinnati, afterwards in New York.

He died at Passaic, N. J., Dec. 5, 1910.

Coleman married, April 8, 1863, Julia H. Raynor, daughter of Henry Raynor, of Syracuse, N. Y. Mrs. Coleman died June 21, 1909.

CHILDREN:

HENRY WOODWARD, April 29, 1865.

GILBERT PATEON, Aug. 16, 1866.

* THOMAS BUCKMINSTER CURTIS, son of Thomas Buckminster and Laura (Greenough) Curtis, was born in Boston, July 19, 1842. Before entering college, he was at Mr. Sillig's boarding school, "Bellerive," at Vevey, Switzerland; two brothers and our classmates, Gardner and Mason, were there at the same time. He returned to Boston when about fourteen, and finished his preparation for college. On graduation he joined his parents in Paris, and the next year began the study of medicine there. Devoting himself with zeal to his studies, he attained great success in his profession, serving for three years as "Externe" and for five years (until 1872) as "Interne des Hôpitaux," in the principal hospitals of Paris. He was in Paris during the siege by the German army, and with the French army during the Commune, always busy with the ambulance corps. In August, 1873, he received his doctor's degree, returned to Boston the next month, and took up the practice of his profession. In 1875 he was appointed surgeon to out-patients at the Massachusetts General Hospital. A little later he was secretary of a committee of five physicians appointed by the Mayor of Boston to report upon the causes and prevention of the high rate of mortality prevailing in the city; the valuable report of the committee was written by Curtis. He was an active member of all the principal medical societies; and was for a time on the editorial staff of the Medical and Surgical Journal and published many treatises, reports, and reviews, both in English and in French. (A full report of Curtis' professional activities appeared in the Fifth Class Report.)

He died in Boston, Dec. 11, 1881.

Curtis married, Oct. 19, 1875, Anna Lovering, daughter of J. S. Lovering, of Boston.

* BEN MAJOR DAVENPORT, son of William and Eliza Ann (Major) Davenport, was born in Woodford County, Ill., July 12, 1837. He fitted for college at the Walnut Grove Academy, Ill., and with Mr. Joseph Willard, in Boston. He joined the class in March, 1859. After graduation he studied law at Eureka, Ill., and in the office of E. Van Buren, in Chicago, being admitted to the bar in March, 1865. In April, 1866, he went to Nebraska City, Neb., where he practised law for several years, in partnership with a Mr. Seymour. As commissioner of immigration for Nebraska, he was largely instrumental in advertising the resources of the State. Returning to Chicago in 1871, he became interested in real estate, and was the manager and proprietor of two hotels, being at the same time an active member of the Prohibition Party, and a leader in the Christian Church. In 1888, owing to failing health, he went to Georgia, and engaged in the real estate business, first at Tallapoosa, afterwards at Cedartown. Here he died, September 16, 1894.

Davenport married, September 29, 1868, Ellen Campbell, daughter of Prof. James C. Campbell, of Hopkinsville, Ky. Mrs. Davenport died in September, 1893.

* ALBERT EDWIN DAVIS, son of Ansel and Caroline M. (Scott) Davis, was born in Westford, Mass., December 23, 1839. He fitted for college at Westford Academy. After graduating he taught school, mostly at Westford, where he was principal of the high school. He died of consumption, January 19, 1869.

* JOHN RICHARD DENNETT, son of John Richard and Mary Dalton Dennett, was born at Chatham, New Brunswick, November 5, 1838. When he was four or five years old, his family came to Massachusetts to live. He fitted for college at the Woburn High School. He was the Class Poet; also one of the editors of the Harvard Magazine. After graduating, he went to Port Royal, S. C., as superintendent of plantations, remaining till March, 1864, when he returned north and entered the Harvard Law School. In July, 1865, he became connected with the New York Nation, at first as Southern correspondent, afterwards as assistant editor. In December, 1870, he was appointed Assistant Professor of Rhetoric in Harvard College; but the drudgery was distasteful to him, and in 1872 he returned to the office of the Nation.

His health was broken even before he left Cambridge; but he continued to write up to the last month of his life. He died at Fay's house in Westborough, November 26, 1874.

* JOHN HOAG DILLINGHAM, son of Abram and Lydia B. (Hoag) Dillingham, was born in West Falmouth, Mass., June 1, 1839. He fitted for college at the Falmouth Academy. For about two and a half years after graduating, he taught in the school of C. A. Miles, at Brattleborough, Vt. He then began the study of law at Cambridge, serving also as proctor and private tutor; but in September, 1865, was appointed Assistant Professor of Latin and Greek, and Librarian, at Haverford College, Penn. In August, 1867, he was appointed Professor of Moral and Political Science. In 1878 he resigned his professorship at Haverford, to take up the duties of Principal of the Friends' Select School for Boys, at Philadelphia. He was for a time editor of The Friend.

EDITH DILLINGHAM was married, in April, 1902, to Edward H. Jacob.

* CHARLES TROWBRIDGE DWIGHT, son of William Dwight (H. C., 1825) and Elizabeth Amelia (White) Dwight, was born in Boston, May 6, 1842. He fitted for college with Mr. S. F. Smith. In 1861 he left college, and was commissioned, October 1, as second lieutenant in the Seventieth New York Regiment (Sickles' Brigade). At the second Battle of Bull Run, Aug. 30, 1862, he was taken prisoner, and was confined for over three months in Libby Prison. He was commissioned first lieutenant, Dec. 6, 1862. He went to Louisiana that winter on the staff of his brother, Gen. William Dwight, and remained there till June 1, 1864, when he was obliged by ill health to resign. He returned to Brookline, where he lived until his death, holding for some years an appointment in the Boston Custom House.

22 CLASS OF 'SIXTY-TWO—H. U.

He died March 10, 1884.

Dwight married, Oct. 18, 1865, Marianne H. Welch, daughter of Francis W. Welch, of Roxbury.

CHILD:

WILDER, April 20, 1868.

ALBERT WILLIAM EDMANDS, son of William Murray and Martha Adams (Tapley) Edmands, was born in Charlestown, Mass., September 9, 1840. He fitted for college at the Charlestown High School. In 1862 he was orderly sergeant of Company A, Forty-fourth Massachusetts Regiment. In July, 1864, he was in business in New York. Since January, 1865, he has been connected with the Bunker Hill National Bank (now a branch of the American Trust Co.), as receiving and paying teller. In 1888 and 1889 he was in the Somerville City Council, the second year as president; and served as alderman in 1890 and 1891. For the last seventeen years he has been overseer of the poor; and for twelve years has served as treasurer of the Somerville Hospital.

Edmands writes: "As graduates of Harvard we are supposed, and justly, to contribute, more than those less favored in their training, to all that concerns the welfare of our city, our country, and our fellow-man. Perhaps without too much egotism I may say I have at least tried to do my share."

Address: American Trust Co., Charlestown, Mass.

Residence: 155 Summer Street, Somerville, Mass.

Edmands married, June 6, 1872, Mary B. Bartlett, daughter of George E. Bartlett, of Lynn.

* CHARLES FOLLEN FOLSOM, son of Rev. Nathaniel Smith and Ann Wendell (Penhallow) Folsom, was born in Haverhill, Mass., April 3, 1842. Before entering college he lived in Charlestown, and in Meadville, Penn., afterwards in Jamaica Plain and Concord, Mass. He fitted for college at Phillips Exeter Academy. In June, 1862, he went to Port Royal, S. C., and served three years as superintendent of plantations, the first season in the employ of the United States; in the Spring of 1865, he acted as general superintendent for the Government on Edisto Island and at Georgetown.

In July, 1865, Folsom returned to Boston and began the study of medicine. After a voyage to San Francisco and back for his health (he returned before the mast), he began practice in Boston. He served as assistant in the private office of Dr. Henry I. Bowditch, and in 1869 was at the City Hospital. He was assistant at the McLean Insane Asylum in 1872-1873; spent a year in study in Europe; and was appointed in September, 1874, Secretary of the State Board of Health, of which Dr. Bowditch was Chairman. After another visit to Europe, to study the subject of sewage-disposal, he was appointed on a commission, with two engineers, to report a plan for the disposal of sewage of Boston; their recommendations were adopted. He was also one of three experts appointed by the National Board of Health to report upon the sanitary conditions of Memphis and the means to suppress yellow fever. From 1877 to 1882, and from 1885 to 1888, he was Lecturer at the Harvard Medical School, on Hygiene and on Mental Diseases; from 1882 to 1885, Assistant Professor of Mental Diseases. In May, 1880, he became a member of the State Board of Health, Lunacy and Charity; and he was, for a short time, a member of the National Board of Health. He was one of the visiting physicians of the Boston City Hospital, and consulting physician to the Adams Nervine Asylum. In 1896 he was one of the commissioners appointed to investigate the charitable and reformatory institutions of Massachusetts. For more than thirty years he pursued his profession in Boston as a general practitioner, devoting himself especially to the treatment of mental disease.

Folsom served as overseer of Harvard University from 1891 to 1903. He was a Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. From 1903 to 1905 he was president of the Harvard Medical Alumni Association.

During the last few years of his life, Folsom gradually became more and more of an invalid. He died at a hospital in New York, August 20, 1907, soon after his return from a visit to England. An account of his activities as a physician, written by Dr. J. J. Putnam, may be found in the Proceedings of the American Academy, Vol. XLIV.

Folsom married, May 12, 1886, Martha Tucker Washburn, daughter of William R. P. Washburn, of Boston, and sister of our classmate.

SHEPARD DEVEREUX GILBERT, son of Samuel Shepard and Sarah Crowninshield (Devereux) Gilbert, was born in Boston, July 28, 1840. He fitted for college at the Boston Latin School. He was a resident graduate in 1863 and 1864. He then went to Port Royal, S. C., purchased plantations near Beaufort, and resided there for several years; served as magistrate, selectman, and county commissioner; was admitted to the South Carolina bar in 1877, and was appointed a trial justice for Beaufort in 1878. A few years later he was engaged in mining in North Carolina. Returning North, he lived for some years in Salem and Boston, passing several summers in Western North Carolina and one season on Snake River, Idaho. In 1889 he went to New York, and was for three years editorially connected with the Lockwood Press of that city. After December, 1891, he was for a time editor of the Engraver and Printer, Boston. Since 1892 he has lived at Salem, spending his summers in his cottage at Jaffrey, N. H. "In the early part of 1899 I passed several months in the South, revisiting my former home on the Sea Islands of South Carolina, renewing my friendship with 'Jimmy' Cole, of our class, who alone remained in that locality of the score of Harvard men who were there in war times."

In 1894 Gilbert became a member of the Massachusetts Society of the Sons of the American Revolution; he has served on its board of managers, and has been a delegate of the State Society at several congresses of the National Society. When the Harvard Union was organized in 1902, he became a life-member; he is also a life-member of the Bostonian Society, and of the Bunker Hill Monument Association, "my great-grandfather having served with distinction on that field." He is a member of the Essex Institute, and is at present secretary of the Old Salem Chapter, S. A. R.

Address: 16 Forrester Street, Salem, Mass.

Gilbert married, June 22, 1882, at Salem, Clara Luisa Emilio, daughter of Manuel and Isabel (Fenellosa) Emilio.

FRANCIS WEBSTER GOSS, son of Ezekiel and Almira D. (Hatch) Goss, was born in Salem, Mass., July 3, 1842. He fitted for college in the Salem High School. In 1862 he was a teacher in Pennsylvania; from 1863 to 1865 a teacher at Newport, R. I. He then entered the Harvard Medical School. He was house physician at the Boston City Hospital, 1868 to 1869; has since been engaged in the practice of medicine in Boston. From 1875 to 1909, Goss served as secretary of the Massachusetts Medical Society, “34 years, — a far longer period than any of my predecessors since the incorporation of the society in 1781.”

Address: The Warren, Roxbury, Mass.

Goss married, April 25, 1872, Maria L. Draper, of Salem.

Mrs. Goss died May 24, 1875.

CHILD:

* FRANCIS DRAPER, July 23, 1873; died Jan. 16, 1879.

Goss married, Jan. 10, 1878, Mrs. Helen Louise Young, daughter of James W. Hobbs, of Boston.

CHILD:

MIRIAM HELEN, Dec. 12, 1879.

MIRIAM H. GOSS was married, Dec. 12, 1905, to Bruce Thurber Shute; they reside in California.

* JAMES INGERSOLL GRAFTON, son of Joseph and Maria (Gurley) Grafton, was born in Boston, June 16, 1841. His father was a major in the United States Army. He fitted for college at Nazareth, Pa. He left college in November, 1861, was commissioned, November 1, second lieutenant in the Second Massachusetts Regiment, and first lieutenant July 21, 1862. At the battle of Cedar Mountain, August 9, 1862, he was badly wounded in the head; and was severely wounded again at Chancellorsville, May, 1863. He was then a captain, having received his commission November 9, 1862. The Second was with Sherman in the march from Atlanta to North Carolina. At Averysborough, N. C., the first serious opposition to the movement was encountered; and here, on the morning of March 16, 1865, Grafton was killed while holding in check, with a handful of skirmishers, the advancing line of the enemy. Lieutenant Samuel Storrow (H. C. 1864), also of the Second, was killed in the same engagement. With but one exception (E. L. Stevens, H. C. 1863, killed at Boykins' Mills, S. C., April 18, 1865), these were the last Harvard men to fall in battle during the War of the Rebellion.

JAMES GREEN, son of James and Elizabeth (Swett) Green, was born in Worcester, Mass., March 2, 1841. He attended the public schools in Worcester, and fitted for college at the Worcester High School. He writes of himself as follows:

“Entering college without condition, I set an example to myself in scholarship which I have quite failed to live up to. In school and college I was handicapped by weak eyes and insufficient strength to endure the sedentary life. As we left college, the War of Secession had been going on for over a year, and I tried hard to get into the army upon the terms laid down by our family physician — that I must not go into the ranks and have to carry a knapsack. By help of the drill we had had at the Cambridge Arsenal, I helped to drill the recruits in some towns out of Worcester, but I failed to get any place for myself in the army. I was entered meanwhile as a law student in Dwight Foster’s office in Worcester, and I entered the Harvard Law School, after being away from Cambridge only a term. The law school was full of many of the ablest men from Yale and other colleges as well as Harvard; and while there was a good deal of hard study in the school, there was little discipline and no examination, and life was even more agreeable there than in college. After getting my law degree in 1864, I spent a year in law offices in New York City and was admitted to practice there. Then I travelled in the West a good part of a year, going as far as to Omaha, which seemed very far in those days, for only thirty miles of the Union Pacific Railroad had been built. Coming back to Worcester I started to practise law, and have been labelled as a lawyer ever since. In 1872 I was sent abroad for my health, and stayed in Europe two years and a half till my father died in the summer of 1874. I lived in Rome three winters, nine months in all, and as much more time in the rest of Italy; I went to Greece and as far as to Constantinople, had a month on foot in Switzerland, a few months more in Germany and Austria, and travelled a little in France and England. All this time I was very much interested in architecture and the fine arts and modern languages. These studies were mostly new to me, and they had a perceptible influence upon my character and after-life. Three years later I went back to Europe again, and spent a year in Spain and England. This year intensified my former interest in modern languages and the fine arts. Coming home again in 1878, I have lived ever since in Worcester, occupied enough in law and the care of real estate to spoil the possibility of cultivating my new tastes in any satisfactory way. As a sign, however, that those new influences were enduring, I would mention that I joined a little German club, the object of which was reading and talking in German, about seventeen years ago, and we have kept the club going ever since. I have also risen to the shining height of president of our Alliance Française and to the pinnacle of president of our Worcester Society of Antiquity, which is our local historical society.

"Not many years after settling down in Worcester, I belonged to the Commonwealth Club of Boston with Senator Lodge and other young radicals of that time. I was for many years a member of the St. Botolph Club, and have belonged to the Massachusetts Reform Club almost ever since the first Cleveland campaign.

"At the time of the British war in South Africa, I wrote a pamphlet on that subject which was circulated freely in America and England, and was even reprinted by the British South African Association for further distribution. I have also written more or less of a biographical nature, including my recollections of the late Daniel H. Chamberlain, governor of South Carolina after the War, and sketches of our departed classmates, Tom Chadbourne, Coleman, C. E. Greene and Ker.

"In writing our obituaries, it is usual to show from whom we are descended, and how far; so I will add that I am derived from John Tilley and his wife through their daughter Elizabeth, who all came over on the Mayflower, and from John Howland who came with them on this ship and married the daughter. John's manner of coming over is thus described in Governor Bradford's "History of Plymouth." "In sundrie of these stormes the winds were so feirce, & ye seas so high, as they could not beare a knote of saile, but were forced to hull, for diuerce days together. And in one of them, as they thus lay at hull, in a mighty storme, a lustie yonge man (called John Howland) coming upon some occasion above ye grattings, was, with a seele of ye shipe throwne into [ye] sea; but it pleased God yt he caught hould of ye tope-saile halliards, which hunge over board, & rane out at length; yet he held his hould (though he was sundrie fadomes under water) till he was hald up by ye same rope to ye brime of ye water, and then with a boat hooke & other means got into ye shipe againe, & his life saved; and though he was something ill with it, yet he lived many years after, and became a profitable member both in church & comone wealthe."

"After I had been thus boat-hooked into the New World, I was further descended from Thomas Dudley, the second governor of Massachusetts Bay; from Rose Dunster, sister of the first president of Harvard College; from Rev. John Woodbridge, an Oxford graduate, brother of the first alumnus named on our Harvard roll; and from Lieut. Phineas Upham, who was fatally wounded at the storming of Narragansett Fort in King Philip's War. Captain Samuel Green, another grandsire, and his son Thomas, were pioneers of Leicester; Dr. John Green, of the next generation, was a pioneer of Worcester. He married a daughter of General Timothy Ruggles, a judge and the president of the Stamp Act Congress, and the most widely known and most hated Loyalist of our neighborhood, in the Revolutionary days; while his son-in-law (Dr. Green) was a rebel beyond hope of pardon.

"Perhaps the most noteworthy fact about my family is this: Three Dr. John Greens, grandfather, father, and son, practised medicine continuously in Worcester for ninety-eight years; if we count in also Dr. Thomas Green, father of the eldest Dr. John, who lived in our adjoining town of Leicester, this one continuous line of surgeons and physicians ministered to this neighborhood for one hundred and thirty-five years without a break. Of each one of the four, moreover, it seems to be the unquestioned contemporaneous opinion that he was at the head of his profession. This record of continuous public service is something satisfactory to contemplate. If my brother, Dr. John Green of St. Louis, and his son of the same name and place (both Harvard men), are thought of in connection with these who preceded them, we have an unbroken record of professional service of a high grade for six generations."

Address: 702 State Mutual Building, Worcester, Mass.

Residence: 61 Elm Street.

Green married, June 2, 1881, Mary A. Messinger, daughter of David Sewall and Harriet (Sawyer) Messinger, of Worcester.

CHILDREN:

MARY SPRAGUE, June 10, 1882.

THOMAS SAMUEL (H. C., 1909), Feb. 9, 1886.

MARY S. GREEN attended school at Bryn Mawr College.

THOMAS S. GREEN was on the board of editors of the Lampoon and the Crimson. He has been attached, ever since graduation, to the cotton-selling office of E. A. Shaw and Co., of Boston, and for the present year he has been working in their branch office at New Bedford, where he makes his home.

* CHARLES EZRA GREENE, son of J. D. and Sarah A. (Durell) Greene, was born in Cambridge, Feb. 12, 1842. He fitted for college at the Cambridge High School and at Phillips Exeter Academy. After graduation he engaged in the manufacture of rifles at Millbury and Worcester. From February to October, 1864, he was a clerk in the quartermaster's department at Readville. Jan. 5, 1865, he was commissioned first lieutenant and regimental quartermaster in the Seventh Regiment U. S. Colored Troops. The regiment served in Virginia and Texas. Greene resigned in August, 1866, returned to Boston, and in October entered the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, taking the course in civil engineering. Graduating in 1868, he was for two years assistant engineer of the Bangor and Piscataquis Railroad, Maine. He then formed a partnership under the name of Greene and Danforth, with an office in Portland. After serving for about a year as city engineer of Bangor, he was appointed, in October, 1872, to the chair of Civil Engineering in the University of Michigan, located at Ann Arbor. Here he lived and worked until his death, serving during the last years as Dean of the department of Engineering. He wrote several works on engineering subjects, such as "Trusses and Arches" (the graphic method of treatment), "Structural Mechanics," etc., besides numerous articles for the scientific magazines. He was also employed as chief engineer and expert on various works, — railroads, bridges, sewerage systems, water works, etc. In 1881 he declined the professorship of Civil Engineering in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. In 1884 he received from his university the degree of C.E. He was the first president of the Michigan Association of Engineers and Surveyors, organized in 1880; he was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers; and was connected with various engineering, banking, and commercial enterprises.

He died Oct. 16, 1903.

Greene married, Sept. 12, 1872, Florence Emerson, daughter of Albert Emerson, of Bangor, Maine. She lives with her son and daughter at Ann Arbor, Michigan.

CHILDREN:

ALBERT EMERSON (B.Sc., Mich., 1896), Aug. 26, 1874.

FLORENCE WENTWORTH (A. B., Mich., 1903), May 19, 1878.

ALBERT E. GREENE is Professor of Civil Engineering in the University of Michigan.

CHARLES EDWARD GRINNELL, son of Charles Andrews and Anna Almy (Cobb) Grinnell, was born in Baltimore, May 7, 1841. He fitted for college at the University of Maryland, School of Letters and Sciences, and at the boarding school of Mr. John Prentiss. He was the class orator; and in 1887, on the resignation of Brigham, he became class secretary. The first two years after graduation he spent at the divinity school of Yale College. The following year he entered the Senior class in the Harvard Divinity School, graduating in July, 1865. Immediately afterwards he went abroad with his wife, spending a year as student of theology at Göttingen, and returning to Boston in October, 1866. On February 19, 1867, he was ordained as pastor of the First Unitarian Church in Lowell. He remained here till November, 1869, when he was installed as pastor of the Harvard Church, Charlestown. This pastorate he resigned December 31, 1873; but he continued to preach in various places until August, 1874, when he retired from the ministry altogether.

In October, 1874, Grinnell entered the Harvard Law School, taking his LL.B. degree in June, 1876. From August to November he was in the office of Chandler, Ware and Hudson; he was then admitted to the Suffolk bar, and opened an office at 5 Court St., afterwards moving to 30

Court St., where he has remained ever since. In July, 1878, he was commissioned a master in chancery for Suffolk County; reappointed in 1893.

Grinnell has published several books: a translation of Uhlhorn's Modern Representations of the Life of Jesus, in June, 1868; in 1883, a book on the Poor Debtor Law of Massachusetts; in 1886, a book on the Law of Deceit; in 1889, a book on the Massachusetts Practice Act; and he has written many articles for legal publications. He was for a time, till December, 1882, editor of the American Law Review. In January, 1871, he preached the election sermon in the Old South Church; in 1893, he delivered the Memorial Day oration at Milton; in May, 1897, he gave an address before the General Convention of Alpha Delta Phi, at Providence. His residence for many years was in Millmont Street, Roxbury.

Address: 30 Court street, Boston.

Grinnell married, July 11, 1865, Elizabeth Tucker Washburn, a sister of our classmate. Mrs. Grinnell died January 26, 1909.

CHILDREN:

CHARLES EWALD WASHBURN, June 30, 1866.

FRANK WASHBURN (H. C., 1895; LL.B., 1898), Dec. 14, 1873.

CHARLES E. W. GRINNELL is in business, at 93 Lincoln Street., Boston.

FRANK W. GRINNELL is a lawyer, at 60 State Street, Boston. He married, June 16, 1908, Isabel Morison. They have a daughter, LESLIE GRINNELL, born May 7, 1911.

* SAMUEL CUSHMAN HAVEN, son of James Henderson and Elizabeth (Cushman) Haven, was born in Nauvoo, Ill., February 19, 1843. He fitted for college at Phillips Exeter Academy, and entered Sophomore. He was the youngest of the class. September 20, 1862, he was commissioned second lieutenant in the One Hundred and Sixty-second New York Regiment; in February, 1863, first lieutenant. About this time he was invited by both Professor Cooke and Professor Peirce to return to Cambridge and teach in the College; but he preferred to remain in the service. While with his regiment before Port Hudson, he became very ill, was removed to the hospital at Baton Rouge, and died there, of diphtheria, June 25, 1863.

* MAYO WILLIAMSON HAZELTINE, son of Mayo and Frances A. (Williamson) Hazeltine, was born in Boston, April 24, 1841. After graduating, he studied for a while at Oxford; then returned to New York and practised law in partnership with Washburn.

In 1878, Hazeltine, "a perfect stranger, submitted to Mr. Dana, of the New York Sun, certain specimens of book criticisms and the like, and was at once offered the literary editorship." His work included the leading book reviews and many editorial articles, particularly on foreign affairs. For thirty years he remained in the service of the Sun, "an indefatigable writer, bringing to his task a store of learning and of knowledge of mankind almost incredible in its dimensions. He possessed a gift of industry akin to genius; and a retrospect of his work reveals a mass that would fill a library. He was a man of admirable personal qualities, self-contained and retiring in his habits, but sharing freely in the agreeable associations of life, and endearing himself to many." Goldwin Smith wrote of him: "The impartiality of his judgment was complete. Not to the Sun alone, but to our whole world of letters, the loss is irreparable."

Hazeltine also did a large amount of writing for the North American Review and other periodicals. He published a few books: "Universities at Home and Abroad," "Chats about Books," "The American Woman in Europe," besides many smaller books and pamphlets.

He died at Atlantic City, Sept. 14, 1909.

Hazeltine married Sophie B. Dallas; they had a daughter, Sophie D. Hazeltine.

WILLIAM HEDGE, son of Thomas and Lydia (Goodwin) Hedge, was born in Plymouth, Mass., Feb. 26, 1840. He fitted for college at the Boston Latin School. He was one of the class crew. He was on the class committee, as Treasurer, until 1907, when he resigned, his place being filled by the election of Read. After graduation he enlisted in Company C., Forty-fourth Massachusetts Regiment, which served under General Foster in North Carolina. In January, 1863, he was commissioned first lieutenant. The regiment was mustered out in June, 1863; and in the fall of that year, Hedge began the study of law in the office of Whiting and Russell, 35 Court Street, Boston. He at the same time took the course of study at the Harvard Law School, receiving his degree of LL.B. in 1866. He was admitted to the bar in the fall of that year. He has continued the practice of law until the present time, at first at 35 Court Street, lately at 950 Tremont Building. "Outside of my profession, my principal interests have been centered in the Plymouth Public Library (of which I have been director and either secretary or president for the past thirty years) and in the work of the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries, obtaining my principal recreation each year by making frequent trips on board the U. S. Fisheries steamer Phalanope during the winter months." His residence is in Plymouth. For over twenty years he has been interested in the Old Colony Natural History Society of Plymouth; and he has been secretary of the Boston Provident Association for nearly fifty years.

Hedge married, October 11, 1871, Catherine Elliott Russell, daughter of Nathaniel Russell, of Plymouth.

CHILDREN:

LUCIA RUSSELL, Dec. 14, 1872.

WILLIAM RUSSELL, January 13, 1876.

HENRY ROGERS, January 13, 1876.

The sons were educated at the Mass. Institute of Technology; they are both in the insurance business in Boston.

HENRY R. HEDGE married, Oct. 11, 1904, Edith Heath Doliber, daughter of Thomas and Ada R. (Heath) Doliber, of Brookline. They have three children: ELLIOTT RUSSELL HEDGE, CATHERINE RUSSELL HEDGE, and PRISCILLA HEATH HEDGE. They live in Brookline. He is president of the Old Colony Insurance Co.

CHARLES EDWARD HICKLING*, son of Charles and Eliza B. (Edes) Hickling, was born in Roxbury, April 24, 1841. He fitted for college with Mr. T. G. Bradford, of Boston. In September, 1862, he enlisted in the Forty-fifth Massachusetts Regiment, became sergeant in October, and served with the regiment in North Carolina. After taking an active part in Foster's expedition to Goldsborough, he was seized with malarial fever; after several weeks in hospital, with no apparent chance of recovery, his father brought him to Boston. He was honorably discharged February 3, 1863. At home he slowly recovered, but with a paralysis of his lower extremities. In October he made a voyage to Fayal, where, and at St. Michael's, he was somewhat benefited. But he never fully recovered, and died in Roxbury, December 17, 1867.

* JOHN HODGES, son of John and Mary Osgood (Deland) Hodges, was born in Salem, Mass., December 8, 1841. He fitted for college at the Salem High School. April 17, 1861, when the Eighth Massachusetts was called out, Hodges joined his company, the Salem Light Infantry ("Zouaves"), and served with the regiment till its return in August. August 22 he was commissioned first lieutenant in the Nineteenth Massachusetts; but in June, 1862, he was obliged to resign on account of sickness contracted in the Peninsular campaign. By November, however, he was well enough to enter the service again, this time as major of the Fiftieth Massachusetts, a nine months' regiment; his commission was signed November 7, 1862. The regiment was sent to New Orleans, and served in the Port Hudson campaign. On his return with the regiment in the fall of 1863, he sought further service; and on February 2, 1864, he was commissioned lieutenant-colonel of the Fifty-ninth Massachusetts (Bartlett's) Regiment. July 30, 1864, at the explosion of the mine before Petersburg, he was severely wounded; and, while waiting in the crater, was struck by a fragment of shell, and instantly killed.

FREDERICK LUCIAN HOSMER, son of Charles and Susan (Carter) Hosmer, was born in Framingham, Mass., October 16, 1840. He fitted for college at the high school of his native town. The winter before entering college he taught school in Lancaster, Mass., and again during the Sophomore winter; in the winter of Junior year he taught in Sudbury, and for six weeks in the winter of the Senior year had temporary charge of the Houghton School, Bolton. On leaving college he was for two years master of the latter school. From July, 1864, to July, 1866, he was master of the Adams (Grammar) School, Dorchester — at present the Harris School, Boston. This position he resigned and entered the Harvard Divinity School in September, 1866. On completing his course here he accepted a call to the First Congregational Church and Society (Unitarian) in Northborough, Mass., as associate minister with the venerable Dr. Joseph Allen, and was ordained by his people without ecclesiastical council, October 28, 1869.

In July, 1872, Hosmer responded to an urgent call from the Second Congregational Church (Unitarian) of Quincy, Ill. — which had then been for two years without a settled minister — and entered upon his pastorate the following October. In April, 1877, he resigned this charge for the purpose of study and travel abroad. After eighteen months in Europe he returned to Boston, and the following month became minister of the Church of the Unity, Cleveland, O. Hosmer's Cleveland pastorate covered fourteen years. From September 1, 1892, to October 1, 1893 (World's Fair year), he was secretary of the Western Unitarian Conference, whose headquarters were in Chicago. The following winter and spring he spent in Colorado and California; and in June, 1894, he accepted a call to the Church of the Unity, St. Louis, succeeding in the pastorate his friend, John C. Learned, who had died six months before. After five years of service he resigned his pastorate with the intention of taking a year free from "regular harness," and spent the autumn of 1899 in his native New England; but in early January, 1900, he accepted a call to take temporary charge of the First Unitarian Church, Berkeley, Cal., then suddenly left without a minister. This move led to his becoming settled as minister, and he remained in the pastorate until July 1, 1904, and has since continued to reside in Berkeley.

In the Spring of 1908, by invitation of the faculty, Hosmer gave before the Harvard Divinity School a course of ten lectures on Church Hymnody; such a course having been provided for by the generous gift of Mr. Horace S. Sears to the School. In the following June Hosmer was elected an honorary member of the Harvard Chapter of the Phi Beta Kappa Society.

Along with occasional sermons and addresses, Hosmer has published: "The Way of Life: a service book for Sunday schools, 1877; "The Thought of God: in Hymns and Poems," in connection with his friend, William C. Gannett (H. U. 1860), 1885; a "Second Series" under same title, 1894; "Unity Hymns and Chorals," in joint editorship with Mr. Gannett and J. Vila Blake, our classmate, Chicago, 1880; and, with Mr. Gannett as joint editor, a much revised and enlarged edition of the same in 1911.

Hosmer's address is 2427 Channing Way, Berkeley, Cal.

JOHN ELBRIDGE HUDSON*, son of John and Elizabeth C. (Hilliard) Hudson, was born in Lynn, August 3, 1839. He attended the Lynn High School, but finished by himself his preparation for college. He graduated at the head of the class. From 1862 to 1865 he was tutor in Greek, Latin, and Ancient History at Cambridge, taking at the same time the regular course at the Law School. He was admitted to the Suffolk bar in October, 1866. From 1866 to 1870 he was with Chandler, Shattuck, and Thayer, at 4 Court Street, Boston; in February, 1870, on the retirement of Mr. Shattuck, the firm became Chandler, Thayer, and Hudson. In 1874 the name was changed to Chandler, Ware, and Hudson; and in 1878, on the dissolution of the firm, Hudson went into practice by himself. He edited the U. S. Digest for 1879.

In May, 1880, Hudson became general counsel of the American Bell Telephone Company; in August, 1885, he was appointed general manager; in December, 1886, vice-president; and in April, 1889, he became president, a position which he held until his death in 1900. In September, 1887, he became also president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, the "Long Distance" company, which, in 1899, absorbed the American Bell Company.

Hudson was a Fellow of the American Academy, and a member of the British Association, the American Antiquarian Society, the New England Historic-Genealogical Society, the Colonial Society of Massachusetts, the Bostonian Society, the Virginia Historical Society, the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, and the Bar Association of the City of Boston; he was also one of the corporation of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He belonged to the St. Botolph, the Union, the Algonquin, and other Boston clubs.

He died at Beverly, October 1, 1900.

Hudson married, August 23, 1871, Eunice W. Healey, of Hampton Falls, N. H.

* FREDERIC WOLTERS HUIDEKOPER, son of Edgar and Frances (Shippen) Huidekoper, was born in Meadville, Penn., September 12, 1840. He fitted for college with private tutors, and entered college with his brother in March, 1859. After graduating, he was in business at Meadville for a time. June 29, 1863, he was commissioned captain in the Fifty-eighth Pennsylvania (three-months') Regiment. Until 1875 he was engaged in manufacturing, and in settling the affairs of the old Holland Land Company. In 1875 he became engaged in railroad enterprises: was president of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Company, with residence at Chicago; afterwards, in 1883, he moved to Washington, D. C., and until 1886 was an officer in the Richmond and Danville and other railroads. He was then for some years president of the Virginia, Tennessee, and Carolina Steel and Iron Company. From 1889, for several years, he acted as receiver for several railroads in the South. In 1896 he became president of the Chicago, Peoria, and St. Louis Railroad Company. In 1901 he became president of the United Land Company of Florida.

In 1901 and 1902 he was governor of the Society of Colonial Wars of the District of Columbia; and from 1903 to his death he was vice-president and president of the Sons of Revolution of the District of Columbia.

He died at Washington, April 29, 1908.

Huidekoper married, January 22, 1867, Virginia Christie, daughter of Fitz-James Christie, of Erie, Penn.

REGINALD SHIPPEN (H. C., 1898), May 24, 1876.

FREDERIC L. HUIDEKOPER and REGINALD S. HUIDEKOPER are practising law in Washington, D. C.

HENRY SHIPPEN HUIDEKOPER, son of Edgar and Frances (Shippen) Huidekoper, was born in Meadville, July 17, 1839. He entered college with his brother in March, 1859. In September, 1862, he was lieutenant-colonel of the One Hundred and Fiftieth Pennsylvania Volunteers. He lost his right arm at the battle of Gettysburg, where he was in command of his regiment. (He is now the only graduate of Harvard College who lost a limb in the service.) February 22, 1864, he was commissioned colonel; and on March 5, 1864, was discharged on account of disability from wounds. September 17, 1870, he was appointed major-general, Twentieth Division National Guard of Pennsylvania. He is now the senior major-general, retired, having served as such for eleven years. In 1874 he published a "Manual of Service" for the use of the Guard.

In 1880 Huidekoper was appointed postmaster at Philadelphia, and served for over five years (under four presidents and seven postmaster-generals) until November, 1885. Among the measures suggested by him, and adopted by the Government, were the raising of the unit of weight for letters from half-an-ounce to one ounce, and the sending of notices to addressees that letters were held for insufficient postage. During his administration, the Philadelphia post-office had a high reputation. On October 11, 1888, Senator Chace of Rhode Island said in the Senate: "The Philadelphia post office, which had been managed for eight years by General Huidekoper, was admitted on all hands, I believe, to have been the best managed post-office in the world, not even excepting the celebrated London office. General Huidekoper had conducted his business purely upon civil service reform principles. There was no charge—there could be no charge—made of his management of the office. He was removed . . . and the chairman of the Democratic City Committee of Philadelphia put in his place."

From January, 1886, to January, 1888, Huidekoper was vice-president and general manager of the Metropolitan Telephone and Telegraph Company, now the New York Telephone Company; and since January, 1888, he has been a special agent of the American Bell Telephone Company, with residence at Philadelphia. He has been president of the Harvard Club of Philadelphia, and is now president of the Netherlands Society of Philadelphia. From 1898 to 1910 he was one of the Overseers of Harvard College, and was conspicuous, among those living outside of Massachusetts, for the regularity of his attendance at meetings. He was one of the Commissioners appointed to build a monument at Gettysburg in honor of the Pennsylvania soldiers who fought there. He is the holder of one of the four congressional medals of honor given to veterans of the War of the Rebellion, based upon record in the War Department — the only graduate of Harvard so honored. This was granted to Huidekoper for gallantry at Gettysburg.

Address: P. O. Box 533, Philadelphia.

Residence: 1710 Chestnut Street.

Huidekoper married, October 26, 1864, Emma G. Evans, of Philadelphia.

CHILDREN:

EMMA GERTRUDE, Oct. 12, 1865.

THOMAS WALLIS, Feb. 2, 1870.

EMMA G. HUIDEKOPER married Professor E. Munroe Smith, of Columbia University. They have a daughter, GERTRUDE MUNROE SMITH, born June 6, 1891. THOMAS WALLIS HUIDEKOPER married Lilian O'Brien. His address is Melville, Montana.

HENRY UPHAM JEFFRIES, son of Dr. John and Ann Geyer (Amory) Jeffries, was born in Boston, Dec. 7, 1840. He fitted for college at the Boston Latin School. After graduation he was for a time in business in Boston. He then went into the house of Russell and Sturgis, at Manila. He was in Boston in 1874, and was at the dedication of Memorial Hall; but he returned to Manila in the autumn. Later he went to Hong Kong, China, and was for a time with the firm of Douglas, Lapraik and Co.; still later he was agent of Mitsu Bishi Goshi Kwaisha, a colliery. Some years ago he retired from business; he is still living at Hong Kong, "a fine-looking man with a long white beard, who spends much of his time at the Hong Kong Club." He spends his summers in Japan, returning to Hong Kong for the winter.

Address: Hong Kong, P. O. Box 111; Yokohama, care of Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation.

DERMOT WARBURTON KEEGAN, son of Patrick and Hannah (Parsons) Keegan, was born in Boston, Aug. 28, 1841. Hannah Keegan was daughter of Israel Parsons of the Revolutionary Army. In October, 1862, Keegan went to Berlin, to study civil law. He was matriculated at the university there, and studied about five months, when his health compelled him to desist from mental labor, and to travel through Europe. After an absence of fifteen months, he returned to Boston and renewed his law studies; but, after two years spent in recruiting his health, he relinquished all hopes of pursuing his chosen profession, and became a partner in the house of Perkins, Livingstone, and Post, dealers in railroad iron and general machinists' supplies, Memphis, Tenn. Keegan was in a branch house at Cincinnati. He was for a time engaged in the manufacture of paper out of wood, under the invention of his brother, Dr. V. E. Keegan. In 1882 he was in the employ of E. R. Mudge, Sawyer, and Co., New York, having charge of the Victory Mills. Later he was alone in business as commission merchant and manufacturer of cotton goods. Several years ago he retired from business.

Address: University Club, New York.

* CHARLES PARKE KEMP, son of Hiram K. and Mary (Peaslee) Kemp, was born in Boston, July 17, 1840. He fitted for college at the Boston Latin School, where he received a prize for a composition in Latin verse. In September, 1862, he entered the Harvard Medical School. After a year's service at the Boston City Hospital, he began the practice of his profession at Springfield, Mass.; but in 1879 he was obliged by ill health to give up practice. After a year spent at the South, much of the time on horseback in the mountains, he settled at Rugby, Tenn., where a "colony" had recently been established by the brothers, Thomas and W. Hastings Hughes. He remained at Rugby till his death, frequently coming North for part of the summer. He died at Rugby, Feb. 12, 1892.

* WILLIAM HENRY KER was born in Natchez, Miss., Jan. 16, 1841. He was in the university crew in 1860. He left college in the Spring of 1861 and served in the Confederate Army; but he received his degree in 1897. In 1882 and 1887 he was living at Port Gibson, Miss.

In January, 1877, Ker was induced by his neighbors to organize a country public school. "This was the beginning of my real life-work, teaching." From January, 1879, to December, 1889, he was Superintendent of Public Education for Claiborne County, Miss.; this office he resigned to become principal of the "Natchez Institute," the city public school. He was much interested in normal schools, especially summer schools, in the promotion of which he busied himself for many years, both as director and as teacher.

Feb. 10, 1897, Ker was taken seriously ill. He never recovered his health, but died at Natchez, Nov. 24, 1902.

Ker married, Feb. 1, 1871, Josephine Chamberlain of Natchez.

CHILDREN:

* JEROME HENRY KIDDER, son of Camillus and — (Herrick) Kidder, was born in Baltimore, Oct. 26, 1842. After graduating, he went to Port Royal, S. C., as superintendent of plantations. From June 16, 1863, to Jan. 31, 1864, he was a private in the Tenth Maryland Regiment. In 1864 he began the study of medicine, receiving his doctor's degree from the University of Maryland in March, 1866. He was commissioned as assistant surgeon in the navy in June, 1866; in March, 1871, passed assistant surgeon; and surgeon in June, 1876. He made two summer cruises, in 1875 and 1879, doing work for the Fish Commission; was with the "Transit of Venus" expedition to Kerguelen Island, and made a report on the natural history of the island; and was on duty at the Naval Laboratory in New York, and at the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery in Washington. He resigned his position in the navy in 1884, and was appointed chemist to the Fish Commission, with a laboratory at the Smithsonian Institution. In 1876 he was elected an honorary member of the Phi Beta Kappa; in 1878 of the Bunker Hill Association.

He died April 8, 1889.

Kidder married at Constantinople, Sept. 18, 1878, Anne Mary Maynard, daughter of Horace Maynard, of Tennessee.

CHILDREN:

HENRY MAYNARD (H. C., 1904; LL.B., 1909), Oct. 31, 1882.

DOROTHY LAURA, June 20, 1884.

ANNE M. KIDDER married Professor E. B. Wilson of Columbia University.

They have a daughter, NANCY, born in 1907.

HENRY M. KIDDER lives with his mother at 38 West 9th Street, New York.

He is in the legal department of the United States Steel Corporation.

DOROTHY L. KIDDER married Lawrason Riggs, Jr., a lawyer; they live in New York.

* EDWIN AUGUSTUS LECOMPTE was born in Boston, Sept. 14, 1835. Before entering college he was for six years with Little, Brown, and Co., booksellers. He fitted himself for college, with the exception of the last year, spent at the Pierce Academy, Middleborough. He was the class chaplain. In August, 1862, he became pastor of the Fourth Street Baptist Church, South Boston. His pastorate was very successful; but in January, 1869, he was called to the First Baptist Church at Syracuse, N. Y. In September, 1874, he moved to Lowell, where he was pastor of the Worthen Street Baptist Church until June, 1879, when he was compelled by severe illness to resign. In January, 1880, he ceased to go out of doors; the disease, consumption, gradually gained the mastery; and he died quietly in his library, March 2, 1880.

Lecompte married, July 24, 1862, Frances Eliza Draper, of Windsor, Conn.

CHILDREN:

FRANK EDWIN, Nov. 10, 1865.

ADELAIDE FRANCES, Aug. 17, 1868.

* WALTER AUGUSTUS (H. C., 1893), July 24, 1870; died Jan. 13, 1907.

EDWARD DELANO LINDSEY, son of Henry and Susan Maxfield (Kempton) Lindsey, was born in New Bedford, March 30, 1841. He fitted for college at the schools of New Bedford. He was the class odist. After graduating he entered the School of Fine Arts at Paris, where he remained until July, 1865, when he returned to Boston, and entered the office of N. J. Bradlee, architect. In 1867 he went to New York, and engaged in the practice of his profession. In 1868 he built the French Theatre, also the Drexel Building, almost the first of the "fire-proofs." His work on the completion, renovation, and redecoration of the Equitable Life Insurance building attracted the attention of some of the officers of the insurance company, who were also trustees of Princeton University; and in the Autumn of 1876 he was appointed to the newly-created chair of Architecture and Applied Art. "My classes belong especially to the students in the John C. Green School of Science, — our technical branch of the college; and I lecture on art from the aesthetic point of view to the seniors in the academic branch as well as those in the school. I have made some progress, I think, in the technical branch; and my department is favorably looked upon. From my professional training, it was deemed wise that I should have charge of the material interests of the college; and I divide with the treasurer the entire care and responsibility, — a heavy burden, as we have sixty-five acres and forty buildings, mostly large. I have been the architect, also, of some six or eight structures for the college of much importance, one that I hope will prove a model dormitory."

In 1880 Lindsey's health broke down, from overwork and exposure to the typhoid epidemic at Princeton; and he resigned his professorship, returning, when health permitted, to the practice of his profession in New York. His principal work has been upon dwellings, both in the city and in the country; he has also been the architect of several large mercantile buildings, such as the Consolidated Exchange, the building for the American Lithograph Co. — one of the strongest commercial buildings in the world — and several theatres, a department in which he is a recognized expert. He is also the inventor of an accepted method of fire-proof construction of floors, etc.

"My Princeton work led me into archaeology and art-history, and I have given many lectures on these subjects, notably in the New York Public School lecture course. I occupy myself in my leisure time, as I have for more than thirty years, in perfecting my multitudinous notes and collections of illustrations, running into thousands; and it is my intention as soon as possible to connect myself with some institution — as professor, if I can — so that I can have legitimate opportunity to complete something worth leaving behind me.

"Prof. William R. Ware, George B. Post, and myself are the oldest living American architects of regular training."

Address: 49½ 8th Avenue, N. Y.

Residence: 175 Amity Street, Flushing, N. Y.

Lindsey married, in June, 1869, Cornelia Howland Swift, of New Bedford.

HENRY HORTON McBURNEY*, son of Charles and Rosine (Horton) McBurney, was born in Roxbury, Mass., Feb. 8, 1843. He fitted for college at A. H. Buck's school. He was stroke in the class crew, and chief marshal. In September, 1862, he went to Paris, and studied chemistry for one year with Wurtz, in the Ecole de Médecine; thence to Heidelberg, where he studied with Bunsen another year, returning to Boston in 1864. He was in business with his father till November, 1866, when he became a partner in the firm of Campbell, Whittier, and Co. In 1873 his lungs became delicate; he passed that winter at Nice, France, and in December, 1874, after an unsatisfactory trip to the island of Santa Cruz, he sailed again for England. He died, suddenly and unexpectedly, at Bournemouth, Feb. 20, 1875.

McBurney married, Jan. 16, 1867, Susan Sturgis, daughter of James Sturgis, of Roxbury.

CHILDREN:

Child: BEATRIX, July 9, 1893.

* EDWARD WILLIAM MCCABE, son of Edmund Hudson and Elizabeth Tilghman (Farish) McCabe, was born in St. Louis, March 7, 1840. He was one of the editors of the Harvard Magazine. In November, 1862, he began his law studies in the office of Judge Krum, St. Louis; after a year he went into the office of his cousin, Mr. Farish. In the summer of 1865 he took out a license to practise, and opened an office in conjunction with his brother, Frank X. McCabe. He died April 3, 1877.

* EDWIN DORR MCCARTHY, son of Henry Reed and Judith Ann (Dorr) McCarthy, was born in Florida, N. Y., Nov. 24, 1839. He fitted for college at the Literary Institute, Franklin, N. Y. After graduating, he served for one year as principal of the High School at Chatham, Mass. He took his degree of LL.B. at the Harvard Law School in 1865. In May, 1865, he was admitted to the bar in New York, and continued to practise law in that city until his death, devoting himself at first to criminal cases, afterwards, and for the greater part of his life, to admiralty practice. For several years he was in partnership with Mr. Delagnel Berier, at 50 Wall Street. He spent many summers in foreign travel, visiting Iceland, Italy, Greece, Egypt, Russia, and Palestine. He died at his home in Plainfield, N. J., Jan. 29, 1895.

McCarthy married, in June, 1891, Edith Wright, of Philadelphia.

* HERBERT COWPLAND MASON, son of Jonathan and Isabella Cowpland (Weyman) Mason, was born in Boston, June 1, 1840. He fitted for college with Professors Lane and Lovering. Nov. 25, 1861, he was commissioned second lieutenant in the Twentieth Massachusetts Regiment, and left college to join his regiment at Poolesville, on the Potomac. In July, 1862, he returned home for a few weeks, very ill with malarial fever; but rejoined his regiment (as first lieutenant) in Sedgwick's Division, Second Corps, in time for the battle of Chantilly and the covering of Pope's retreat. Jan. 6, 1863, he was promoted to a captaincy. He was severely wounded at Gettysburg, July 3; and in the Spring of 1864, finding that the injury would disqualify him for further service, he resigned, and was honorably discharged, with the brevet rank of major, March 23, 1864.

March 1, 1867, Mason entered the counting-room of Lawrence and Co., 17 Milk Street, Boston. He was in New York for five years; but returned to Boston in the Fall of 1873, and became treasurer of the Ipswich Mills.

He died suddenly, at Stockbridge, Sept. 24, 1884.

Mason married, Oct. 6, 1868, Mary Gertrude Dana, of Boston.

CHILDREN:

MABEL GERTRUDE, July 19, 1869.

PHILIP DANA (H. C., 1897), Oct. 30, 1873.

JULIA APPLETON, Feb. 11, 1878.

* HENRY MATHES was born in Portsmouth, N. H., Sept. 4, 1839. He fitted for college at Phillips Exeter Academy. He rowed in the class crew. After graduating, he studied medicine with Dr. Coleman, of Portsmouth.

He died at Concord, N. H., March 13, 1904.

* BENJAMIN CROWNINSHIELD MIFFLIN, son of Charles and Mary Crowninshield Mifflin, was born in Boston, Dec. 7, 1839. He studied for some time in Paris, returned in 1855, and fitted for college with Professor Lane. In November, 1862, he joined the Forty-ninth Massachusetts (Bartlett's regiment) as adjutant. The regiment joined Augur's division of Banks' corps at Baton Rouge, La., and took part in the campaign against Port Hudson. At the battle of Plains' Store, Mifflin displayed great bravery; at the assault on Port Hudson, May 27, 1863, he was with Bartlett when the latter was wounded. Later Mifflin was detailed as aide-de-camp on the staff of Gen. William Dwight. He fell sick during the summer, returned home, and was mustered out with his regiment Sept. 1, 1863.

On returning to civil life, Mifflin formed a partnership with Ballou, under the name of Ballou and Mifflin, bankers and brokers. The partnership was dissolved in 1872, and Mifflin continued in the same business, under the firm name of B. C. Mifflin and Co. He was much occupied with literary pursuits, and was a frequent contributor to the press on dramatic matters; he also wrote a memoir of his father, remarkable for the skill and care with which it was prepared. For a year or two before his death his health was poor; trips to Europe afforded only partial relief; early in 1880 he became a great sufferer; and on June 16 of that year he died, at the Hotel Brunswick, in Boston.

Mifflin married, in November, 1869, Sarah E. Learned, daughter of Edward Learned, of Pittsfield, Mass.

ARTHUR HOWARD NICHOLS, son of John Perkins and Mary Ann (Clarke) Nichols, descendant in the sixth generation of Richard Nichols, of Ipswich, was born in Boston, Sept. 9, 1840. He fitted for college at the Endicott and Public Latin schools. Upon graduation he began the study of medicine. In September, 1863, he accompanied classmate Munroe to Paris to study anatomy at the Ecole de Médecine. Returning to Boston in the autumn of 1864 he entered the Harvard Medical School, serving as house surgeon at the Massachusetts General Hospital from April, 1865, till May, 1866, when he received his medical diploma. In August, 1866, he returned to Europe, continuing his studies at Vienna and Berlin. In September, 1868, he began practice in Boston, and at Rye Beach, N. H., during the summer months. At his marriage he settled at 130, Warren street, Roxbury, occupying the historical mansion known as the Warren House. In 1885 he removed to 55 Mount Vernon Street, Boston. In his professional work he has had considerable experience in medico-legal cases involving personal injuries. He has always been interested in scientific change-ringing upon tower bells, and has published several papers relating to campanology. He is a member of three London ringing guilds. In 1893 he bought a farm at Cornish, N. H., upon the Connecticut river, for retirement during periods of vacation. He has made numerous trips to Europe, and has visited also Cuba and Porto Rico.

Nichols married, Nov. 11, 1869, Elizabeth Fisher, eldest daughter of Thomas J. Homer, Roxbury.

Residence: 55 Mt. Vernon St., Boston.

In the Spring of 1859 he left college to go into business in Chicago; but returned in 1861, passed his examinations, and rejoined the class at the beginning of the Senior year. July 21, 1862, he enlisted in the Thirty-third Massachusetts Regiment, and was appointed orderly sergeant. March 3, 1863, he was commissioned second lieutenant, and attached to the staff of General Meade. He was killed by guerillas near Bristow Station, Va., on the night of Aug. 24, 1863.

* GILBERT RUSSELL PAYSON, son of Samuel Russell and Hannah Gilbert (Cushing) Payson, was born in Boston, May 11, 1840. He fitted for college at E. S. Dixwell's school. Aug. 2, 1862, he entered the employ of J. C. Howe and Co., domestic commission merchants, 51 Franklin Street, Boston, devoting his attention especially to printed goods; on Jan. 1, 1867, he was received into the firm. He continued in that business connection until July 1, 1874, when the firm of White, Payson, and Co. was formed, with offices at 43 Avon Street. He remained a member of this firm until his death. He was also a director of the Hamilton National Bank, one of the corporation of the Suffolk Savings Bank, and was on the standing committee of the Old South Society.

He died at his home in Watertown, June 8, 1891.

Payson married, June 12, 1867, Althea, daughter of Charles R. Train, of Framingham.

* ROBERT SINGLETON PEABODY, son of Jeremiah D. and Ellen M. (Hanna) Peabody, was born near Zanesville, O., June 12, 1837. He fitted for college at Phillips Andover Academy, delivering the valedictory, and entered Harvard in 1857 with the class of 1861; but, owing to sickness, joined the class of 1862 the next year. After graduating, he entered the law school, taking his LL.B. degree in 1864. He practised at first in Rutland, Vt.; but in November, 1869, he moved to Germantown, Pa., where he continued in the practice of law until his death, Oct. 1, 1904.

Peabody married, Nov. 7, 1866, Margaret A. Goddard, of Zanesville, O.

CHILD:

CHARLES, Nov. 9, 1867.

* CHARLES BURNHAM PORTER, son of Dr. James B. and Harriet (Griggs) Porter, was born in Rutland, Vt., Jan. 19, 1840. He came of a long line of distinguished doctors, being seventh in descent from Dr. Daniel Porter, who settled near Farmington, Conn., about 1650. Fathers and sons, there have been eighteen doctors in the family. Our Porter fitted for college at the schools of Rutland. He was the class chorister. On graduating, he entered the Harvard Medical School, graduating in 1865; during the last year he was house surgeon at the Massachusetts General Hospital, and for three months in 1865 he was at the Armory Square Hospital in Washington, having the rank of Acting Assistant Surgeon, U. S. A. From 1866 to 1879 he was at the Harvard Medical School as Assistant Demonstrator and Demonstrator in Anatomy and Instructor in Surgery; from 1882 to 1887 he was Assistant Professor of Surgery, and from 1887 to 1903, Professor of Clinical Surgery. He was surgeon to out-patients at the Massachusetts General Hospital from 1866 to 1875, when he was made visiting surgeon; he resigned this post in 1903. He also held for some time a government appointment as examining surgeon for pensions. In 1868, and again in 1870, he visited Europe, doing post-graduate work in Berlin, Vienna, and London.

In addition to his work as teacher and as surgeon, Porter busied himself with general practice, being much valued as a physician by many Boston families.

He died at his home, 5 Arlington St., Boston, May 21, 1909.

CHILDREN:

DOROTHY, Dec. 4, 1885.

ELINOR, March 11, 1888.

JOHN READ, son of William and Sarah G. (Atkins) Read, was born in Cambridge, May 19, 1840. He fitted for college at the Cambridge High School. He was one of the 1862 crew which defeated the Yale Sophomores at Worcester, and which three times more that year was victorious in prominent races.

After graduation he entered the United States Navy as paymaster, on Nov. 7, 1862, and was attached to the United States ironclad ram Keokuk, being on that vessel at the time she was shattered and sunk by the fire of Fort Sumter and other Charleston forts, in the attack by Admiral Dupont's fleet, April 7, 1863. The Keokuk, when leading the fleet, received ninety shots in thirty minutes, the white heat of the battle, most of which went entirely through her deck and sides. He then joined the West Gulf squadron on the gunboat Granite City, which was employed in 1863-1864 in blockading the coasts of Louisiana and Texas, and participating in the different engagements in that department. He was in ten different engagements.

On May 6, 1864, in an engagement at Calcasieu Pass, Louisiana, Read was captured and confined in Texas, a prisoner of war, for seven and a half months, most of the time without shelter, in the open prison camps Gillespie and Chapel Hill, and in the open stockade of Camp Groce. Dec. 19, 1864, he was released, broken in health, being one of only thirty-two survivors out of the one hundred and eleven originally captured; seventy-nine having died from neglect, exposure, and insufficient food, being a loss of over seventy per cent. He was then ordered to the United States sloop of war Kearsarge, but was obliged by ill health to resign from the service, March 18, 1865. He returned to Boston, and became a member of the firm of William Read and Sons. In 1872 he sailed for South America, going up the Amazon and visiting the different ports of Brazil.

After the war Read was active in the public service. He was a member of the Cambridge Common Council in 1880 and 1881, of the Board of Aldermen in 1882 and 1883, of the Massachusetts House of Representatives in 1888 and the Senate in 1892 and 1893. In the Senate he was chairman of the committees on military affairs, state water supply, and federal relations, and also a member of the committees on banks and banking, education, and prisons.

In 1907 Read was elected treasurer of our class. He was chief marshal of the Cambridge fiftieth anniversary celebration in 1896. He was also chief marshal of the naval procession of the Grand Army National Encampment held in Boston in 1904. He is a member of Post 56 G.A.R.; member and has been vice-commander of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion; and member of Kearsarge Naval Veterans. He has been for twelve years past, and is now, a State Commissioner of the Massachusetts Nautical Training School and Schoolships Enterprise and Ranger; is trustee of the National Sailors' Home; commander of the Massachusetts Commandery of the Naval Order of United States; president of the Cambridge Civil Service Association, and is a member of the National Council of the Civil Service Reform League of the United States. He delivered the Memorial address at Harvard in 1900. He was chosen one of the electors of the Electoral College of Massachusetts in the first election of President Taft in 1909, and has this year been elected a delegate to the National Presidential Convention in Chicago in favor of President Taft.

ARTHUR REED, son of Caleb and Mary E. (Minot) Reed, was born in Boston, Aug. 13, 1841. He fitted for college at the Boston Latin School. In September, 1862, he enlisted in the Forty-fifth Massachusetts Regiment, was appointed quarter-master-sergeant in October, served with the regiment in North Carolina, and was mustered out in July, 1863. In 1868, he went into the insurance business in Boston, and has remained in this business ever since. Through his membership in the Harvard Glee Club in college days, he became much interested in vocal music, especially for male voices; and he was one of the founders, in 1871, of the Apollo Club of Boston, a male-voice club of fifty members, of which he was the first secretary and virtually business manager, and so remained for twenty-five years. The club has been most successful, having had imitators all over the country, some of which have adopted its name. Reed was also one of the founders of the Cecilia of Boston, a mixed-voice club of about one hundred members in its early days, of which he was one of the managers for twenty years.

Address: 27 Kilby Street, Boston.

Residence: Clinton Road, Brookline.

Reed married, Oct. 28, 1866, Elizabeth H. Webster, of Boston. Mrs. Reed died in Paris, May 13, 1870. Dec. 3, 1892, he married Mary Hunt McCollom, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

CHILD:

ARTHUR MINOT, March 7, 1894. "He is to celebrate his father's semi-centennial of graduation by entering Harvard in the fall of 1912."

* JOSEPH SAMPSON REED, son of Sampson Reed (H. C., 1818) and Catherine (Clark) Reed, was born in Boston, Dec. 13, 1841. He fitted for college at the Boston Latin School. In 1862 he went to Port Royal as superintendent of plantations on Ladies' Island. In 1863 he was employed as a clerk in Chicago; but soon returned to Port Royal, bought a plantation on Ladies' Island, near Beaufort, and lived there and at Beaufort till his death, which took place Jan. 12, 1897. In 1895 he wrote: "I believe I can claim no other present honors except being Democratic county chairman, which simply seems to involve labor and condemnation. It has been, however, I think, a rather unusual thing, perhaps, in this State, for a so-called Northern man to receive these honors. I was for some years lieutenant in the Beaufort Artillery and Naval Reserve, but have withdrawn from the military." At the time of his death he was treasurer of Beaufort County.

Reed married, Dec. 29, 1870, Florence A. D. Scammon, daughter of J. T. Scammon, of Chicago.

CHILDREN:

EFFIE, Sept. 13, 1871.

WINIFRED, Sept. 17, 1872.

MARY FLORENCE, Feb. 13, 1876.

CLARK SCAMMON, Feb. 14, 1878.

CLARK S. REED is living in Chicago.

FREDERIC WILLIAM ROGERS*, son of Octavius T. and — (Trask) Rogers, was born in Milton, Mass., May 15, 1840. He fitted for college at Milton Academy. In 1863 he went into business in Boston, and was for a time with the firm of Rogers, Shute, and Co., 75 Summer Street. In January, 1880, he went to New York, and went into business with Butler Brothers. About 1893 he went to California, living at San Diego till a short time before his death.

Rogers married, Sept. 7, 1886, Mrs. M. K. Leach, of Boston.

He died at National City, Cal., Feb. 15, 1906.

HENRY MUNROE ROGERS, son of John Hicks and Lucy Catherine (Smith) Rogers, was born in Boston, Feb. 27, 1839. He fitted for college at the Boston Latin School. On the death of Chapman in 1865, Rogers was chosen a member of the class committee, and later its Chairman. Nov. 5, 1862, he was appointed acting assistant paymaster in the navy; he served first on the Daylight, on blockade duty off Wilmington, N. C.; afterwards on the Asculney and the Wilderness participating in 1864–1865 in the movements resulting in the taking of Fort Fisher and Wilmington N. C. He left the service Nov. 20, 1865. Sept. 30, 1865, while on a three months' leave of absence, he entered the law school at Cambridge, where he remained until April 23, 1867, taking his LL.B. degree that year. On the first of April, 1867, he entered the law office of Messrs. Brooks and Ball, 40 State Street, Boston, remained there till the summer of 1869, and in September took an office at 42 Court Street, where he remained until 1901. He was admitted to the Suffolk bar in April, 1868.

In June, 1901, Rogers formed a partnership with Frank A. North, under the name of Rogers and North, and took rooms at 89 State Street. April 1, 1903, the firm became Rogers, North, and Johnson, Melvin M. Johnson joining the firm. In December, 1907, Rogers withdrew from the firm, retaining, however, his old office; the firm, still at 89 State Street, is now Johnson and North.

Rogers has travelled much, both on this continent and abroad. He has crossed the Atlantic thirty-eight times.

In 1903 he visited Honolulu, where he met Brigham; Japan and China, where at Hong Kong he saw Jeffries; thence home by way of the Straits Settlements, Ceylon, India, Egypt, Turkey, Greece, Italy, and the Azores, spending considerable time in each country.

Of his professional activities Rogers writes:

"During my professional career, and especially while in the activities of admiralty practice, I have been engaged in many cases of far-reaching importance, especially those relating to carriage by sea, bills-of-lading, marine insurance, and kindred subjects.

"I have been before almost every kind of a tribunal, from the Municipal Court of our city to the Supreme Court of the United States. In 1878 I was engaged in a suit for libel,—perhaps the last case where such a combination of circumstances could occur,—as counsel for the plaintiff, a former runaway slave, against a wealthy and prominent citizen of Boston, defendant, wherein those who had formerly been slaves in the South were witnesses on one side or the other. I was also the initiator of the criminal prosecution for barratry against the captain and for the indictments against merchants of Boston engaged in a conspiracy to defraud marine insurance companies, in the famous case of the Mary Celeste, a cause which lasted for several weeks and which was conducted with rare ability by Warren K. Blodgett, Jr., then assistant U. S. District Attorney (H. U., 1878). In that case I was conspicuous by my absence whenever the court was in session.

"My writings have been of a sporadic and ephemeral character, in the press and elsewhere.

"My life has been and is full of varied interests and of associations of a somewhat unusual character; from its variety I believe I have derived a better understanding of mankind than I should have had if I had confined myself exclusively to the routine of professional work. Whether this be so or not, my course was chosen deliberately: my interest in my profession has never abated, and my delight in travel grows with my advancing years. Within a twelve month of this writing, I have visited Yellowstone Park in the north and Cuba and Panama in the south."

In May, 1911, Rogers was elected Senior Vice Commander of the Massachusetts Commandery of the Loyal Legion of the United States and in October, 1911, a member of the Council of the National Commandery of the Loyal Legion of the United States.

Address: 89 State Street, Boston.

Rogers married, April 24, 1878, Clara Kathleen Barnett, daughter of John and Eliza E. (Lindley) Barnett of Cheltenham, England; and he and his wife are still living at 309 Beacon Street, Boston.

HENRY ROPES*, son of William and Mary Ann (Codman) Ropes, was born near London, May 16, 1839. He fitted for college with Sidney Willard, in Boston. He suffered during his college course from weak eyes, which interfered very much with his studies. He was in the University crew in 1860. Nov. 25, 1861, he was commissioned second lieutenant in the Twentieth Massachusetts Regiment, and first lieutenant Oct. 2, 1862. He was with the regiment through the campaigns of that year, from Yorktown to Fredericksburg, and escaped with only slight wounds. But at Gettysburg, July 3, 1863, during a pause in the infantry conflict, he was killed by the premature explosion of a shell from one of our batteries.

CHARLES SPRAGUE SARGENT, son of Ignatius and Henrietta (Grey) Sargent, was born in Boston, April 24, 1841. He fitted for college chiefly at Epes S. Dixwell's school in Boston. In November, 1862, he was first lieutenant on the staff of General Banks; in July, 1864, a captain.

Since 1872, Sargent has been Director of the Arnold Arboretum, and, since, 1879 Professor of Arboriculture, in Harvard University. From 1872 to 1873 he was Professor of Horticulture, and from 1873 to 1879, he was Director of the Botanic Garden. In the interests of the Arboretum he has travelled in all parts of the United States and has made numerous visits to Europe. He passed the Summer and Autumn of 1902 in Japan; in 1903 he travelled in the Caucasus and through Siberia to China and Java, returning home by Japan. In 1905-1906 he visited Peru and Chile, returning home by the Straits of Magellan, the Falkland Islands, and Europe.

From 1879-1884 Sargent, as an agent of the Tenth Census of the United States, had charge of the investigation of the forests and forest wealth of the United States; and in 1883 he was a member of the Northern Pacific Transcontinental Survey. In 1885 he was the chairman of a commission appointed by the governor of the State of New York to recommend a plan for the preservation of the Adirondack forests; and in 1896-1897 he was the chairman of a commission appointed by the National Academy of Sciences to prepare a report upon the inauguration of a rational forest policy for the forested lands of the United States. From 1881 to 1895 he was engaged in the formation and arrangement of the Jesup collection of North American woods in the American Museum of Natural History in New York.

For forty-one years Sargent has been a trustee of the Massachusetts Society for Promoting Agriculture, and is now president of the society. He is a trustee of the Museum of Fine Arts, of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, and of the Massachusetts Society for the Preservation of Beautiful and Historic Places. Since 1880 he has been a park commissioner of the town of Brookline. He has been a director of the Boston & Albany Railroad for thirty-two years, and is now president of the corporation, and he is a vice-president of the Massachusetts Hospital Life Insurance Company.

Sargent is a member of the National Academy of Sciences, the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, the American Philosophical Society, the St. Louis Academy of Sciences, and a corresponding member of the Philadelphia Academy of Sciences. He is a foreign member of the Linnaean Society of London, the Royal Society of Ireland, the Société Nationale d'Agriculture de France, the Royal Horticultural Society of England, the Société Nationale d'Acclimatation de France, the Deutsche Dendrologischen Gesellschaft, the Scottish Arboricultural Society, the English Arboricultural Society, and the Oesterreichische Dendrologischen Gesellschaft. He is a corresponding member of the Botanical Society of Edinburgh and of the Société Centrale Forestière de Belgique, an associate member of the Société Royale de Botanique de Belgique, and a member of the Société Botanique de France, and of the Société Nationale d'Horticulture de France.

He is the author of a "Catalogue of Forest Trees of North America," 1880, a "Report on the Forests of North America," being volume IX of the "Final Reports of the Tenth Census of the United States, 1884," "The Woods of the United States, 1885," "The Silva of North America, 1891-1902," "The Forest Flora of Japan, 1894," "Trees and Shrubs, 1905 —," "Manual of the Trees of North America, 1905," "A Guide to the Arnold Arboretum, 1911," and of many papers in scientific journals, chiefly on the woody plants of North America. He was editor of "Garden and Forest" from 1887 to 1897, and he has edited The Scientific Papers of Asa Gray, the Journal of André Michaux, and the "Plantae Wilsonianae."

He has received the degree of LL.D. from Harvard, the gold medal of the Société Nationale d'Agriculture de France for the Silva of North America, and the Veitch memorial medal (England) for services to scientific arboriculture. He was the first recipient of the George R. White medal given through the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for service to horticulture.

Residence: Warren Street, Brookline, Mass.

Sargent married, Nov. 26, 1873, Mary Robeson, daughter of Andrew Robeson, of Tiverton, R. I.

CHILDREN:

HENRIETTA, Aug. 28, 1874.

ANDREW ROBESON (H. C., 1900), Dec. 2, 1876.

MARY, April 8, 1878.

CHARLES SPRAGUE (H. C., 1902), March 7, 1880.

ALICE, March 26, 1882.

"For four years each of my boys was a member of the 'Varsity squad, one playing guard and the other centre."

HENRIETTA SARGENT was married, May 17, 1895, to Guy Lowell (H. C., 1892).

MARY SARGENT was married, Jan. 25, 1908, to Nathaniel Bowditch Potter (H. C., 1890; M.D., 1896). They have two daughters: NATALIE, born July 13, 1909, and MARY ROBESON, born June 1, 1911.

ANDREW ROBESON SARGENT married, Nov. 3, 1909, Maria de Acosta, of New York.

CHARLES S. SARGENT, Jr., married, May 9, 1912, Dagmar Wetmore, of New York.

WINTHROP SARGENT, son of Henry Winthrop Sargent (H. C. 1830) and Caroline (Olmsted) Sargent, was born in New York, April 3, 1840. He was fitted for college by private tutors. On account of ill health he was obliged to leave college during the Senior year; but, "owing to the kind efforts of my classmates, to whom I have always been grateful, I was accorded my degree," in 1892. He was in the Law School two years, taking his LL.B. degree in 1864. After the death of his parents, he interested himself in horticulture, and in the care of his gardens at his old home, "Wodenethe," Fishkill-on-Hudson. Here he has lived for the past thirty years, though spending many winters in Boston. For twenty-five years he has been president of the Highland Hospital at Fishkill, an active institution which he helped to build and to support. He has also been president of the Public Library, a director of the bank, and, for thirty years, warden of the Episcopal church. "For twenty-one years my wife and I have been much interested in the Sargent Industrial School, founded and supported by us. Here free instruction is given annually to six hundred young women and girls of the neighborhood; the object of the School is to prepare the pupils for the effective administration of a private home, or to enable them to earn an independent livelihood."

For several years Sargent has been somewhat of an invalid. He gave up his office at 30 Court St. some years ago, and now spends most of the year at his old home, at Fishkill-on-Hudson.

Sargent married, Dec. 2, 1873, Aimée Rotch, daughter of Benjamin S. Rotch and Annie Bigelow Rotch, of Boston.

EDWARD BABCOCK SAWTELL, son of Charles and Ruth J. (Fairbanks) Sawtell, was born in Fitchburg, Mass., Sept. 26, 1840. He fitted for college at the Leicester Academy. In September, 1862, he went to Port Royal, S. C., where he remained several years. In 1868 he was a law student in Fitchburg. In March, 1871, he was admitted to the bar, and began the practice of law. After a few years he moved to Manchester, N. H., and found employment in a mill. Some time ago ill health compelled him to give up work; and he has been for the last few years at the Beacon Hill Hospital in Manchester.

Sawtell married, Sept. 9, 1874, Mary J. Whitney, of New London, N. H. Mrs. Sawtell died some years ago.

ARTHUR SIBLEY, son of Stephen and Anna (Emerson) Sibley, was born in Chelsea, Mass., April 9, 1840. He fitted for college at the Chelsea High School. He was bow-oar of the class crew. From November, 1862, to October, 1865, he served as acting assistant paymaster in the Mississippi squadron; he was present at the running of the Vicksburg blockade, on the Red River expedition, and at the fight at Arkansas Post. After the war he bought a steamboat, and had her ply between New Orleans and the mouth of the river. After the New Orleans riot he returned to Chelsea, and went into business with his father, manufacturing woollens. He continued in this business, with offices in Boston, till 1908. He has been employed by Boston banks as expert accountant.

Residence: 18 Grand View Avenue, Wollaston, Mass.

CHARLES CARROLL SOULE, son of Richard Soule (H. C., 1832) and Harriett (Winsor) Soule, was born in Boston, June 25, 1842. He fitted for college at the Boston Latin School and the Brookline High School. While a Freshman, he was a collaborator on Worcester's Dictionary. In 1861 he was one of the party of students engaged in the "River Observations" at Concord, Mass; (others were Hudson, Nichols, Nye, C. H. Porter, Pritchard, Stone, Trask, Ware, and G. P. Stevens, 1863). Near the end of his college course he became captain in the Thirty-third Massachusetts Regiment, but was not mustered into the United States service. As the regiment filled up very slowly, he left it in July, 1862, and went to Port Royal, S. C., to oversee plantations. Hearing of the formation of the Forty-fourth Massachusetts Regiment, he returned to Boston in October, enlisted as a private, and on October 22 was commissioned second lieutenant in Company B. When the term of office expired, he joined the Fifty-fifth Massachusetts as captain of Company K, and remained with it through the war. At the battle of Honey Hill, S. C., he received a slight flesh wound in the arm. From May until August, 1865, he was provost judge and superintendent of freedmen in South Carolina. The following winter he spent in Charleston, in the real-estate agency business, returning in April, 1866. In May he became a clerk with Messrs. Little, Brown, and Co., Boston. In October, 1869, he went West, and became the senior partner in the new firm of Soule, Thomas, and Winsor, law and general booksellers in St. Louis, Mo. In 1877, during the serious riots in St.

Louis, lasting a week, Soule commanded, as major, the "University Club Battalion," which gave valuable assistance to the authorities.

May 1, 1878, Soule accepted an offer of partnership from Little, Brown, and Co., sold out his interest in St. Louis, and "emigrated back to Boston." In 1881 he left Little, Brown and Co., and formed the partnership of Soule and Bugbee, for publishing, importing, and selling law books, at 37 Court St., Boston. This partnership expired in 1884, and Soule continued the same business alone, moving to the Freeman Place Chapel, 15½ Beacon St. In June, 1890, he established the Boston Book Co., of which, from the beginning, he has been the president. The company is now located on Francis St., near the Harvard Medical School. "The company has two specialties: law books, and full sets of periodicals on all subjects and in all languages. It deals not only in this country, but also in Europe and all the British Colonies." In 1883 Soule published "The Lawyers' Reference Manual," a volume of legal bibliography; a second edition was issued in 1897.

While in St. Louis, Soule wrote two travesties, "as a skit for the University Club (of which I was a founder): 'Romeo and Juliet,' and 'Hamlet Revamped, a Travesty without a Pun.' They made an unexpected hit for amateur representation. I was not proud of their literary quality; but they seemed to have 'go.'"

In 1879 Soule joined the American Library Association, and has since served actively in its different working offices, "finally taking library architecture as a specialty. On this subject I have spoken, written, and advised a lot." Among his publications are "Points of Agreement among Librarians on Library Architecture," "Library Rooms and Buildings," and the article "Library" in Russell Sturgis's Dictionary of Architecture and Building. He is now (December, 1911) "engaged in preparing a volume on 'How to Plan a Library Building,' to embody my experience of forty years; which I hope to live to finish and publish." The book will be published in June, 1912.

For some years Soule has been employed, by library trustees and others, as an expert adviser on library construction and equipment: "In this way I have been able to add considerably to a declining income, by expert service which seemed to be successful and appreciated; a perhaps unique example of altruistic work helping one materially in his old age." A few years ago his advice as to the proper appropriation for a new library building for Brookline saved that town about $150,000; and more recently, as one of the visitors to the Harvard Library, "I have been able to give some work to Alma Mater, in consulting with the special board of architects to suggest site and plans for a new building adequate to the needs and dignity of the University."

Soule reports that he has made over twenty business trips across the Atlantic: "I have spent in all over a year of my life in ocean travel, — a good record for a poor sailor. In 1907 I visited fourteen countries of Europe, interviewing leading lawyers and judges. Four months of this, using ten different languages, was a strenuous polyglot whirl."

About twenty years ago, Soule suffered from a serious attack of grippe, followed by a severe case of scarlet fever. He has never been well since. In August, 1910, he had a stroke of paralysis, from which he has partially recovered; but he has to give up details of business, "though I am allowed literary recreation."

Since he returned from St. Louis, Soule has resided in Brookline, for the last fifteen years and until this spring in his own house, 45 Warren Street, beautifully situated on the eastern shore of the old reservoir. He has recently moved to Wellington Terrace.

Soule married, Oct. 9, 1878, Louise Charless Farwell, of St. Louis.

CHILDREN:

RUTH MAYNARD, April 17, 1880.

DOROTHEA WINSOR, Oct. 24, 1881.

CHARLES CARROLL, Sept. 25, 1883.

* BARBARA, July 28, 1888; died July 30, 1890.

RUTH M. SOULE was married, May 25, 1912, to Frederic Bourne Taylor, (H.C., 1899; LL.B., 1902), of Brookline.

DOROTHEA W. SOULE was married, May 5, 1909, to William Balch Coffin (H. C., 1899), of Brookline, "nephew of our classmate Balch." Their son, WILLIAM BALCH COFFIN, Jr., was born May 20, 1910.

C. C. SOULE, Jr., graduated at Annapolis in 1904; he is now a lieutenant in the navy. March 24, 1909, he married Oleta Pettigrove, of Seattle, Wash.

JAMES HENRY STEARNS, son of Orrin O. and Nancy Crawford (Valentine) Stearns, was born in Hancock, N. H., Jan. 9, 1841. He fitted for college at various schools in the West. He entered the Sophomore class in 1859. In July, 1864, he was principal of a school for young ladies in Wisconsin. In July, 1865, he was in the Union Telegraph office in Chicago. Afterwards he went to Freeport, Ill., and became a member of the law firm of Neff and Stearns; the firm is now Stearns and Zipf. He was at one time county judge. He writes, in May of this year, "I am growing old and lazy. I am no longer a judge, and in fact have practically retired from law practice. I am afraid there is not much show for my going East again."

Address: 116 Oak Place, Freeport, Ill.

Stearns married, in 1869, Ruth M. Chapin, of Dubuque, Iowa.

CHARLES BRIGHAM STODDARD, son of Isaac Nelson and Martha Le Baron (Thomas) Stoddard, was born in Plymouth, Mass., Jan. 4, 1842. He fitted for college at Concord, Mass., and at Phillips Exeter Academy, Exeter, N. H., entering the class of 1862 at the beginning of the Sophomore year. Immediately after graduation he entered the quartermaster's department at Camps Lynnfield and Boxford, and was, at the formation of the Forty-first Regiment of Massachusetts Volunteers, commissioned first lieutenant and regimental quartermaster. This regiment was attached to the Banks expedition, sailing for New Orleans on the North Star with General Banks and his staff. In Louisiana it was mounted and its name changed to Third Massachusetts Cavalry; it served through the Teche, Port Hudson, and Red River campaigns. In the Summer of 1864, Stoddard was promoted to be captain and was detailed as A. A. Q. M. of the Second Brigade, Second Division, Nineteenth Army Corps; serving in that position and in command of his company at Petersburg, and through Sheridan's campaign in the Shenandoah Valley. He afterward received a commission as captain and A. Q. M., U. S. Volunteers., and was mustered out of service in August, 1865.

After that time he was engaged in manufacturing and as treasurer of manufacturing corporations until January, 1881, when he was chosen cashier of "The Plymouth National Bank," established in 1803, of which bank his father was cashier and president from 1845 to 1891. He succeeded his father as president in 1891, and still continues to hold that position. Since 1890 he has been treasurer of the Pilgrim Society of Plymouth, and since 1897 treasurer of "Trustees of the Stickney Fund."

Address: Plymouth, Mass.

* GOODWIN ATKINS STONE, son of Jacob and Eliza (Atkins) Stone, was born in Newburyport, July 12, 1841. He fitted for college at Dummer Academy, Byfield. On graduating he became principal of the high school at Concord, Mass. April 14, 1863, he was commissioned first lieutenant in the Second Massachusetts Cavalry, and captain March 25, 1864. July 6, 1864, he was severely wounded in a skirmish at Aldie's Station, Va.; he died at Fall's Church, July 18.

* GEORGE GROSVENOR TARBELL, son of C. L. Tarbell, was born in Lincoln, Sept. 9, 1841. He fitted for college at Phillips Exeter Academy. On graduating, he entered the Harvard Medical School, acting for a time as house surgeon of the Massachusetts General Hospital. April 7, 1865, he was appointed assistant surgeon Third Massachusetts Cavalry; Aug. 9, surgeon; mustered out Sept. 28, 1865.

In May, 1866, Tarbell began the practice of his profession, at first in Hingham; after December, 1867, in Boston. He served for eighteen years as visiting physician of the Massachusetts General Hospital; also for a time as examining surgeon of the New York Life Insurance Company. He was president of the board of trustees of the Home for the Feeble-Minded; also chairman of the trustees of the Lincoln Public Library.

He died Dec. 28, 1900.

BENJAMIN HOLT TICKNOR, son of William D. and Emeline S. (Holt) Ticknor, was born in Boston, Aug. 3, 1842. In 1847 his family moved to Jamaica Plain. He fitted for college at the Chauncy Hall School. Feb. 8, 1862, he sailed for Ship Island, as assistant quartermaster on the transport Idaho, returning on the Constitution. In July, 1862, he entered the employ of Ticknor and Fields, publishers; but in August he enlisted in the Forty-fifth Massachusetts Regiment, being commissioned second lieutenant Sept. 13. When the regiment went to Newbern in November, he was detained by sickness, but joined the regiment in December, and served with the garrison of Fort Macon till May, 1863, when he was commissioned second lieutenant in the Second Massachusetts Heavy Artillery, and was sent home to recruit. In August he was commissioned captain, and put in charge of the recruiting camp at Readville. In October he returned to Newbern, where he remained till his resignation, April 17, 1864.

Ticknor rejoined the firm of Ticknor and Fields, and in 1865 took charge of the New York branch, returning to Boston in 1867. May 1, 1870, he became a partner in the firm of Fields, Osgood, and Co. He retired in February, 1878, and was for a time with S. D. Warren and Co.; but joined the new firm of J. R. Osgood and Co. in 1880. The firm failed in May, 1885, and was succeeded by that of Ticknor & Co., and this by Houghton, Mifflin, and Co.

Address: 13 Harris Avenue, Jamaica Plain.

EMELINE CUSHMAN TICKNOR married, April 20, 1911, James Melville Hunnewell.

FREDERIC WILLIAM TILTON, son of Benjamin and Lucinda (Newell) Tilton, was born May 14, 1839, in Cambridge, Mass. He graduated in the English department of the Cambridge High School in 1854, and entered the counting-room of his brothers, who were engaged in business in Boston. He remained there nearly two years. He then returned to the High School and prepared for college in two years. Immediately after graduating from college he went abroad with our lamented Chapman for travel and further study. After a trip through England, Scotland, Ireland, and parts of the continent, he went to Göttingen, entered the university, and studied there nearly an academic year. Soon after his return, in the summer of 1863, he was appointed instructor in Latin and Mathematics at the Highland Military Academy, in Worcester, Mass. In January, 1867, he was elected superintendent of the public schools of Newport, R. I. He held this office until the Summer of 1871, when he was elected successor to Dr. S. H. Taylor, as principal of Phillips Academy at Andover. While in Newport he represented Newport County in the first Rhode Island State Board of Education. In 1873 he was invited to assume the head-mastership of the Rogers School in Newport, R. I., a new institution, founded from the endowment of the late William Sanford Rogers, of Boston. Tilton resigned at Andover to accept this position, and entered upon his new duties in the Autumn of 1873.

Tilton served many years in Newport as master of the Redwood Library and also as director of the People's Library. He was long a member of the board of trustees of the Newport Hospital, and served for several years as its president. In 1885 and 1886 he travelled extensively with his family in Europe, having secured leave of absence for this period. In 1890 he retired from all professional work, and lived with his family in Europe from 1890 to 1894. During this time two of his sons took German university degrees, one, William, as Doctor of Philosophy, and the other, Benjamin, as Doctor of Medicine. Since his return to this country in 1894 he has lived in Cambridge. He has acted as trustee of estates, and has served for many years as director of the Harvard Trust Company, and as vice-president and a member of the investment committee of a savings bank. Among the clubs with which he has been associated are the Newport Reading Room and the Cambridge Club.

His present address is: Care of Harvard Trust Co., Cambridge, Mass.; residence, 86 Sparks Street.

July 21, 1864, Tilton married Ellen Trowbridge, of Cambridge. Mrs. Tilton died January 5, 1910.

CHILDREN:

WILLIAM FREDERIC, Feb. 24, 1868.

BENJAMIN TROWBRIDGE (H. C., 1890), July 17, 1869.

ELLEN MAUD, Feb. 29, 1872.

NEWELL WHITING (H. C., 1900), Oct. 26, 1878.

WILLIAM F. Tilton was at Harvard three years with the class of 1890; he is a Ph.D. of Freiburg. He has written on historical subjects. He married Elizabeth Hewes, of Cambridge; they live in Cambridge.

BENJAMIN T. TILTON holds a German degree of M.D. He is a surgeon in New York City. He married Anna Griggs, of Tacoma. They have three daughters, Heartie, Susan, and Maud.

ELLEN M. TILTON married Frederic William Atherton (H. C., 1886), of Boston.

NEWELL W. TILTON is of the firm of Harding, Tilton, and Co., of New York, Philadelphia, and Boston. He lives in New York. He married Mildred Bigelow, of New York. They have two daughters, ELLEN and DAPHNE.

* JABEZ NELSON TRASK was born in Freedom, Me., Oct. 19, 1831. His early life was passed in the backwoods of Maine in pioneer warfare. He fitted for college at Phillips Exeter Academy, and entered Harvard the Sophomore year. After graduation he spent a year at Port Royal, S. C., another year as resident graduate at Cambridge, and graduated from the Divinity School in 1866. Having served a year as Indian agent in Colorado, he returned to Cambridge in 1872; preached at West Cummington, Mass., in 1873, was ordained in June, and settled in New Salem in November. In May, 1901, he moved to Orange. Here he spent the rest of his life, occupying himself with various literary, scientific, moral, and religious work; he did a good deal of surveying in different parts of the State. He died at the Massachusetts General Hospital, March 8, 1909.

Trask married, July 16, 1873, Lydia Maria Stratton, of New Salem. Mrs. Trask died Aug. 6, 1900.

* JOHN HARVEY TREAT, son of James Augustus Treat (H. C., 1832), was born in Pittsfield, N. H., July 23, 1839. He fitted for college at Phillips Andover Academy. After graduation, until 1892, he was in business with his father in Lawrence. His interests were very various in character. He was an enthusiastic entomologist and backwoodsman; he was much interested in history, genealogy, numismatics and inscriptions; was a collector of rare books; and wrote several theological treatises of a polemic character. In 1875 he was in Palestine with the American Exploration party; the ancient coins collected on this trip were given in 1887 to the New England Historic-Genealogical Society. In 1888 he gave to Harvard College his collection of works on Ritualism and Doctrinal Theology; also his collection of insects; and, in 1901, he gave the college a fund to procure every book on the Roman catacombs and the Christian antiquities of Italy. He was a member of several historical and antiquarian societies.

He died at Pittsfield, N. H., Nov. 8, 1908.

EDWARD MORTON TUCKE, son of Edward and Emily (Coburn) Tucke, was born in Lowell, Mass., May 3, 1840. He fitted for college at the Lowell High School. In January, 1863, he began business as a clerk for Messrs. Wilson, Hamilton, and Co., Boston, where he remained three years, and then became a partner of the firm of Hall, Dame, and Bullock; he lived in Chicago until July, 1868, when he returned to Boston. In January, 1871, the name of the firm was changed to Dame, Tucke, and Co. In January, 1872, he sold out his interest, and, after a few months spent in New York, returned to Lowell.

In January, 1874, Tucke became secretary and treasurer of the Traders' and Mechanics' Insurance Co., a position he still occupies. He has also been president of the Whittier Cotton Mills, president of the Middlesex Trust Co. in Lowell, president of the Old Lowell National Bank (a position held for many years by his father), and president of the Lowell and Suburban Street Railway, now absorbed by the Massachusetts Electric Co's. He is one of the Trustees of the City Institution for Savings, and a director in the Lowell Gas Light Co.

Tucke has served as councilman and alderman at Lowell; was in the Massachusetts Legislature in 1886 and 1887; and was elected to the State Senate in 1890.

Residence: 19 Varnum Street, Lowell.

Tucke married, Dec. 2, 1874, Katharine Parker, of Lowell.

CHILDREN:

* EMILY, Aug. 24, 1875; died May 5, 1877.

* ROWENA, Sept. 10, 1882; died Jan. 3, 1885.

* EDWARD PARKER, March 14, 1884; died Oct. 4, 1884.

* EDWARD HILDEETH, June 10, 1887; died March 11, 1911.

PARKER, May 18, 1890.

KATHARINE, May 28, 1892.

* JOHN HENRY TUCKER, son of Ebenezer and Eliza Bradly (Foster) Tucker, was born in Cambridge, Feb. 19, 1835. For several years before entering college he followed the occupation of a carriage-painter; but in 1856 he began to fit himself for college, finishing his studies at the Cambridge High School.

Tucker had intended to study for the ministry; but he decided that his country needed his services. In September, 1862, he enlisted as a private in the Thirty-eighth Massachusetts Regiment, went with the regiment to Louisiana, and was killed in the attack on Port Hudson, May 27, 1863.

JOHN LANGDON WARD, son of William R. L. and Sophia A. (Langdon) Ward, was born in Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 25, 1841. He fitted for college at Salem, Mass., and Portsmouth, N. H.

On April 15, 1861, Ward and Hodges, his classmate, pursuant to orders from the captain of the Salem Light Infantry (afterwards known as the Salem Zouaves), to which company they both belonged, left college and reported at Salem for active duty. The company was attached, as Company J, to the Eighth Regiment Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, the regiment that opened the way to Washington via Annapolis, and left Boston for Washington on April 18, 1861. The Zouaves, together with a detail from other companies of the regiment, were placed on board the old frigate Constitution at Annapolis, and, with the undergraduates of the Naval Academy and a few petty officers of the navy, brought the frigate from Annapolis to New York; then, returning to Washington, they were the first to enter that city by water after the war broke out. In September, 1861, Ward returned to college.

After graduation, Ward began the study of law in Salem, Mass.; but in September, 1862, he raised a company of which he was commissioned captain, and which was attached to the Fiftieth Regiment of Massachusetts Volunteers, of which Hodges was commissioned major. The regiment was attached to the Banks Expedition, and left New York for New Orleans in September, 1862, serving in that department through the Port Hudson campaign. In July, 1863, Ward was commissioned major of the Third Infantry, Corps d'Afrique, and detailed as Commissary of Musters for the corps on the staff of General George L. Andrews at Port Hudson. He resigned on July 21, 1864, upon the consolidation of his regiment with another, and the breaking up of the corps. He resumed the study of law under the late Professor Dwight of the Columbia College Law School, was admitted to the bar in April, 1865, and has since been a practising attorney in New York. With the successive firms of North, Ward, & Wagstaff, and Ward, Hayden, & Satterlee, he for nearly forty years was a tenant in the Equitable Building at 120 Broadway, until the building was burned in January, 1912. He is now with his firm practising law at 16 Exchange Place.

For three years, from January, 1868, Ward was secretary of the Union League Club of New York. In 1895 he was elected Senior Vice-Commander of the Commandery of the State of New York of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, and in 1910 was elected its commander, and re-elected in 1911. From 1902 to 1910 he was commander of George Washington Post, No. 103, department of New York, Grand Army of the Republic. In 1910 he was elected president of the Dwight Alumni Association, and re-elected in 1911 and 1912.

In 1886 he crossed the ocean in the English-built yacht Miranda, owned by his friend, George H. B. Hill, from Cowes to New York as navigator.

In 1891 he accepted the Republican nomination for judge of the Court of Common Pleas of the city and county of New York, meeting certain defeat, but by a smaller majority than was expected.

Address: 16 Exchange Place, New York.

Residence: 125 West 74th Street.

Ward married, Oct. 25, 1871, Ann Parry Ladd, second daughter of Alexander H. and Elizabeth W. (Jones) Ladd, of Portsmouth, N. H.

WATSON MCLEARY.

JOHN EATON WHITING, son of Eaton and Olive (Smith) Whiting, was born in West Dedham, Mass., May 4, 1840. He fitted for college at the high school in Dedham. After graduation he went to his farm, where he remained until September, 1864, when he became connected with the Bunker Hill Fire Insurance Company at Charlestown. In January, 1865, he was made secretary of the company. During the Summer and Fall of 1866 he was travelling, finally settling in Cincinnati, Ohio, as agent for the Berkshire Life Insurance Company, in the meantime publishing several articles on the mathematical principles of life insurance. In the Spring of 1868 he returned to his farm in West Dedham, and there remained until June, 1869, when he became clerk in the National Insurance Company in Boston, where he remained until the office was closed in 1873, on account of losses sustained in the great Boston fire of November, 1872. The same Fall he was chosen president of the Dedham High School Association; and in November, 1873, delivered the annual address. In January, 1874, he was chosen one of the surveyors of the Boston Fire Underwriters' Union, a position he held until the Fall of 1875, when the Union ceased active operations. In 1877 he published a work of reference for the use of insurance companies entitled "A Schedule of the Buildings and their Occupancy on the Principal Streets and Wharves in the City of Boston." In 1879 he became connected with the Shawmut Insurance Company of Boston. In 1882 he was in Buffalo, engaged in the general lake and canal transportation business. In July, 1884, he returned to Boston, and accepted the position of Chief Inspector of the Boston Board of Fire Underwriters.

In January, 1888, Whiting left Boston to assume the position of manager of the New Orleans Board of Fire Underwriters; this position he retained until the Board went to pieces in the Spring of 1890. At that time he was offered the position of Superintendent of the Survey Department of the Boston Board; but, having in the meantime been offered the secretaryship of the Philadelphia Fire Underwriters Association, he accepted the latter position instead. After remaining here for two years, he returned in the Spring of 1892 to New Orleans, as the chief inspector of the re-organized New Orleans Board. In February, 1893, he was elected secretary of the Crescent Insurance Company of that city. After serving three years in this position he became interested, in the Spring of 1896, in a mining venture in Central America, to which he devoted the next four years; but, this having proved a failure, he returned to the United States.

Since the Summer of 1901, Whiting has been connected with the rating department of the New York Fire Insurance Exchange, devoting his attention more especially to the rating of the large, special-hazard, manufacturing risks located in New York City and Brooklyn. In May, 1907, he delivered an address on Rating Associations before the insurance class of New York University.

Address: 123 Williams Street, New York.
